TRANSVAAL SHARE CORP. TO HANDLE OIL FIELD

Mr. Reeves Leaving in Few Days For England to Arrange For Drilling Near Lonsdale—Report is Very Favorable.

"The prospects are so good that some of the leading South African financiers are coming in with us," said Mr. Walter H. Reeves, of London, England, representative of the General Oil Fields, Ltd., in an interview to-day in reference to the oil indications in Tyendinaga, near Lonsdale. "The fields will now be worked by the Transvaal Share Corporation, Ltd., the General Oil Fields, Limited being interested in this corporation."

The report made by Prof. McLean, who went over the ground is so satisfactory that Mr. Reeves is more optimistic than ever. He and Mrs. Reeves are leaving for England on Saturday and after a fortnight in England will return to Canada, coming back about the end of December. His purpose while across the sea is to arrange for drilling and other work shortly to be undertaken. Cables are daily passing between Mr. Reeves and the interests he represents.—Belleville-Ontario.

ADOLPHUSTOWN

The cheese factory is only working every other day this week.

C. Buck and F. Taverner have finished moving to their new farms. With the families will be greatly missed. A number of neighbors and friends gathered and presented Mrs. Buck with a handsome case of cutlery prior to her departure. A number representing the Methodist church met at Mr. Taverner and presented him with a hymn book and Mrs. Taverner with a casserole as tokens of regard.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Price, of Selby, visited at William Magee's last week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Magee and Mrs. A. Keech and Lewis Magee, Desoronto road, also Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Magee were at Geo. Magee's on Sunday.

Mrs. Jas. Dorland spent the week-end with Mrs. VanDyke at Conway.

Mrs. J. W. Allison spent last week with friends in Napanee.

M. B. Trumpour, his mother and sister, were guests at H. Trumpour's last week.

Quite a number from Adolphustown attended the service held at Conway on Sunday evening to mark the union of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches.

D. Carlette held an auction sale of his stock and implements on Monday.

The W. M. S. met at the home of Mrs. W. J. Magee on Wednesday of last week.

Alexander Wright returned from Point Anne on Saturday.

It is rumored around town that the best bargain in gramophones, records and music, can be obtained at KNIGHT'S up-to-date pharmacy, Napanee. Prospective buyers will do well to inspect his machines before buying elsewhere.

DENBIGH

A pleasant family reunion is being enjoyed at the homes of Mr. Osoar Chatson and Mrs. F. Chatson, where the following members have arrived for an extended visit to their old home: Fred Chatson, from Renfrew, Lorne Chatson, Canada, Alberta and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Fritsch, (nee Dora Chatson) and son, Leslie, from Webb, Sask.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Jackson with son and daughter, are welcome visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bolin's, and Mr. A. Armstrong, of Tweed, at Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Warlich's.

Lorne Ready, Jas. McLaughlin and the Misses Pearl Ready and Lily Rodgers, who during the summer and fall have been employed in Saskatchewan have returned home, and G. John, Roy Chatson and Vernon Lane have left for New Ontario, where they intend to spend the winter lumbering.

Miss Katie Marquardt, who has been teaching school at Hardwood Lake, in Raglan Township, has, owing to poor health, been obliged to quit teaching for a time, and is taking a rest at her home here and Mr. Geo. Ball has been engaged to teach the remainder of the term and will begin his duties next Monday.

The establishment of a Continuation School in our village has been under consideration for some time, and a public meeting was held in C. Bath's hall on the 4th inst., at which Mr. M. R. Bell, of Sharbot Lake, I.P.S., and Mr. G. R. Mills, of Toronto, Inspector of Continuation Schools, were present and gave suitable addresses. A local committee was appointed to attend to and take further action in the matter.

Since the opening of the hunting season our woods have been alive again with sportsmen both local and from more or less distant places. The members of some of the camps are reported to have met with great success and to have nearly the number of deer to which they are entitled while those of some other camps have so far met with very poor luck.

When driving to Na[illegible]apanee after his arrest Young told [illegible] Provincial officer that it was [illegible] first motor ride. Noticing a Ger[illegible]an cannon, a trophy awarded [illegible] town, he wanted to know what it was. The information evidently conveyed nothing to him.

"Didn't you hear [illegible]about the war?" asked the Provincial officer.

Young replied "[illegible]he had heard some fellows talking about it a while back, but didn't paid much attention."

An inquest was held at Kaladar, on the home of Jas. Forsythe, on Wednesday evening, by Coroner Cowan, of Napanee, accompanied by Mr. U. R. Wilson, K. C.

Following is the verdict:

"Mrs. Ella Young came to her death at the Township of Kaladar, on the 3rd day of November, 1920, at the hands of some person or persons unknown."

WILTON

A very enjoyable time was spent on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Burgess, when a large number of their friends gathered to bid them farewell before their departure for their new home in Napanee. The central feature of the evening was the presentation of a beautiful set of [illegible] and appropriate address by N. A. Asselstine. Mr. Burgess will be greatly missed in his capacity as councilman and secretary of Wilton Farmers' Co-operative.

Henry Hutchison has returned to his home here from his western trip.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Storms left for an extended visit with friends at Crosby and Portland.

The remains of the late Sampson Davey, Bealton, Ont., were interred in the Wilton cemetery Saturday afternoon.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

Council Chamber,
Nov. 15th, 1920.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor J. E. Robinson presiding.

Present—Reeve Graham, and Councillors MacGregor, Roblin and Ming.

The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from Lewis Harrison, Water street, making a complaint that his well had been made unfit for use, because of a supposed leak in the main sewer running past the residence. The communication further asked the council to take steps to repair the leak, and put the well in a sanitary condition.

Ordered fyled.

A communication was read from the Canadian National Railways offering to the town a number of old railway ties to be used as fuel for the poor. Dr. Ming, chairman of the Board of Sanitary Committee reported that he had accepted the offer of the Canadian National Railyays, and had already received 400 ties.

Communication fyled.

On motion the Streets Committee were instructed to have the roadway, near the approach to Riverside cemetery, put in proper repair.

The Fire Water and Light Committee presented the pay sheet of the Fire Department for the year 1920. Also a report from the Fire Chief.

On motion the pay sheet of the Fire Department was received and ordered paid, and the report from the Fire Chief referred to the Fire Water and Light Committee for a report thereon.

Teach the Children to Save

Habits are acquired early in life. Children, who are taught the value of money and the habit of saving, grow up into good business men and capable women.

The easiest way to teach children to save, is to start a Savings Account for each child ($1.00 each is sufficient). After a child has saved another dollar to make an additional deposit, he or she will have a better appreciation of just what a dollar stands for, and how much work and self-denial it represents.

Preparation to Repel Flies.

While there are various preparations on the market designed to keep flies from cows or other live stock, the farmer can make a good fly repellent by using any of the following mixtures: Fish oil, 3 parts; kerosene, 1 part. Fish oil, 100 parts; oil of tar, 50 parts; crude carbolic acid, 1 part. Fish oil, 1½ pints; kerosene, 2½ pints; resin, 1½ pounds; laundry soap, 2 cakes. Mix thoroughly and add enough water to make three gallons. Fish oil, linseed oil, or kerosene, 1 pint; coal tar dip, 1 pint; laundry soap, 1¼ bar; hot water, 15 pints. Mix thoroughly so as to form an emulsion. The fish oil is the principal ingredient that repels the flies. Either a brush or a hand-sprayer can be used to apply any of these mixtures. The sprayer will be more convenient. Applications will have to be made at frequent intervals to be effective.

Keep the most vigorous, early maturing cockerels that are of good size for breeders.

The general farmer is finding that the dairy cow is a valuable asset in his farming operations.

REDS SMASH WRANGEL

Armies Have Been Wiped Out by the Bolsheviki.

Forces That Were Opposing the Soviet Rule In Russia Are Now In Full Flight After Suffering Huge Losses, and Leaders Will Take Refuge In Constantinople.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—The army of Gen. Wrangel, the anti-Bolshevik leader in South Russia, has been wiped out.

The White army, thoroughly beaten, is continuing to retreat southward, according to information received by the French Foreign Office, pursued by a well commanded Bolshevik army of 27 divisions. Gen. Wrangel has suffered great losses and many of his officers have been killed.

The evacuation of Sebastopol by civilians and foreigners is under way, according to Foreign Office advices. It is reported that the Bolsheviki captured the seaport Saturday night. The members of Gen. Wrangel's Government, however, were still in Sebastopol Saturday afternoon, although the Bolsheviki were reported to be occupying the suburbs, including Simferopol, and capturing many prisoners and large quantities of materials.

Information reaching the Foreign Office says the Bolsheviki did not storm the Perekop lines, but by an enveloping movement of their left wing invaded the Crimea. They crossed over the ice-frozen Putrid Sea and attacked the main body of Gen. Wrangel's troops, which then were still holding the Perekop defences, from the rear.

Gen. Wrangel has decided not to attempt guerilla warfare in the Crimea, the information adds, owing to the overwhelming Bolshevik forces converging on the peninsula, which are variously estimated at between 150,000 and 200,000 men.

According to an official Moscow wireless message the commander of the Bolshevik army on the southern front has sent a demand to Gen. Wrangel for his immediate surrender, promising amnesty to Gen. Wrangel and his troops.

Gen. Wrangel has gone aboard one of the French warships in Sebastopol, but the vessel is still remaining in port, says the advices. The evacuation is continuing, but there is inadequate shipping for the number of persons seeking to flee.

Wrangel's troops are declared to have fought splendidly in the battle of their defeat, which began with the loss of Perekop and soon developed into a wild retreat toward headquarters at Sebastopol.

Despatches received at the Foreign Ministry here assert that there have been no mutinies. On the contrary, they praise the courage of the White army and the sacrifices of their officers. The despatch says that the White army inflicted heavy losses on the Bolsheviki, but that they were overwhelmed by the Reds, who are reported to be well organized and led. Some of their officers are said to be Germans.

The rout of Baron Wrangel far eclipses all the other news in the newspapers of Paris. The majority of the journals admit that all hopes of ousting the Moscow Government are now dead.

In the meanwhile Kerensky is reported as organizing a volunteer army in Poland, Tcheckoslavakia and Hungary, for an offensive against Russia.

The allied authorities in Constantinople are requisitioning all available buildings along the Bosphorus, and the shelters and barracks on Prinkepo Islands in the Sea of Marmora to house refugees expected to arrive from the Crimea.

Premier Krivochin, of Gen. Wrangel's Government, arrived in Constantinople to arrange for the transport of women, children and wounded from the Crimea. He said the possibility of a general evacuation of the Crimea could not be excluded and that everything was being done to save the remnants of Gen. Wrangel's army.

"Evacuation will be extremely difficult," Premier Krivochin declared, "but we have opened pour parlers to establish conditions regarding evacuation."

The situation is extremely grave, M. Krivochin said.

Million Stolen by Bandits.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 16. — Efforts were being made Sunday to recover between $1,000,000 and $1,200,000 stolen by train bandits when they broke into a mail car on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway between here and Council Bluffs, early Sunday. Scores of secret service men, post office inspectors and details of police worked throughout the day searching for the robbers and their loot.

A portion of the loot was a treasury shipment of gold from the United States mint in San Francisco to the United States treasury in Washington, it was reported. Besides the gold there was a vast quantity of currency, bonds and registered mail.

VENIZELOS WILL WIN

Greek Leader Is Confident of Complete Victory.

He Is Being Opposed In the General Election Now In Progress by the Men Who Want ex-King Constantine to Be Returned to the Throne, Who Are Led by M. Gounaris.

ATHENS, Nov. 16.—Premier Venizelos announces that his party has obtained a majority in the elections throughout Greece.

Demetrios Gounaris, former premier and leader of the Opposition, who was the opponent of Premier Venizelos in the balloting, was the candidate of the elements desiring the return of Constantine. M. Venizelos, on the other hand, is unalterably opposed to the return of the fallen monarch. A bitter campaign has been waged by both sides, and no matter which side carries the election, trouble is feared. Claims of certain victory were made by both the Venizelists and the Royalists, with indications that M. Venizelos would poll a big majority in the new provinces of Macedonia and Thrace and the island, but that old Greece would witness a fierce struggle.

Gounaris made preparations for quick flight in case the elections went against him, having requested passports to Italy on Friday last. Exiled during the war on the charge of high treason, he was permitted with the approval of M. Venizelos to return to take part in the campaign, but should he fail of election his parliamentary immunity would expire immediately. In case Premier Venizelos is successful, he will be given a free hand in the selection of a new head of the state. Prince Paul, who was offered the throne on the death of the late King Alexander, not having as yet formally accepted the Government's invitation to return from Switzerland and rule Greece.

HAVE NO JURISDICTION.

Magistrates Cannot Try Income Tax Evasions.

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—Judge Gunn rendered his decision in the County Court Saturday in the appeal brought by Dr. Gordon Booth against a conviction registered against him last October in the Police Court, whereby he was found guilty of having made false income tax returns to the Dominion Income Tax Department for the years 1917, 1918 and 1919 and was condemned to pay $3,000.

Judge Gunn quashed the conviction on the grounds that no justice of the peace or magistrate has jurisdiction to try cases of this nature.

The decision will no doubt have a far-reaching effect in future prosecutions.

The judgment concludes as follows:

Until I hear it clearly stated so in that Act, and as it stands Parliament having given expressly all jurisdiction to the Exchequer Court, I do not appreciate the attempt here made to institute proceedings before a provincial authority of inferior jurisdiction as it means and leads to far-reaching convictions not reasonably within the consideration.

"In any case I am clearly of the opinion that the injection of the words 'on summary conviction' in sub-section two of section nine does not clearly and expressly confer jurisdiction on any magistrate or justice of the peace to convict any person of any penalty laid by the Income War Tax Act.

"In any event, if I am in error in holding that the deputy police magistrate had no jurisdiction to hear and determine the information and complaint, I am, as judge of the fact and law, of opinion that the information and conviction contains no ground for complaint against the Income War Tax Act."

Several other citizens of Ottawa were fined by the magistrate about the same time as Dr. Booth, but have not yet appealed. The judgment points out that the law makes no provision for further appeals from the decision of the county court judge.

Crowd Sees Warrior's Grave.

LONDON, Nov. 16. — For the fourth day the pilgrimage to the cenotaph in Whitehall and the Unknown Warrior's grave in Westminster Abbey has continued. It began Sunday morning shortly after six o'clock and all through the day until late at night an endless procession filed past the Whitehall memorial, and, whenever the doors were opened, into the abbey. In order not to interfere with the usual Sunday services the abbey was opened to the processionists for only two intervals of two hours each. Queues extending for miles in several directions converged on Whitehall and nearly everyone seemed to be carrying bunches of flowers. The base of the memorial is now lost in a mass of magnificent flowers, from simple sprays from the poor people to costly wreaths from the rich. It is estimated that at least 30,000 floral tributes have been deposited.

Sugar War Resumed.

MONTREAL, Nov. 16.—The sugar war is on again in full force and a large wholesale firm will sell Royal Acadia pure cane granulated sugar at 12 cents net, following the reduction by the Dominion Sugar Company on Friday to 11.40 cents net to wholesalers.

The Big Four refineries, the St. Lawrence, Acadia, Canada and Atlantic Sugar Refineries, were quoting at 13 cents, less five per cent., on Saturday.

Retailers have been selling at from 14 to 16 cents a pound, but many again cut their prices this week.

D'ANNUNZIO DEFIANT.

Will Not Agree to Settlement of Fiume Question.

FIUME, Nov. 16.—The hostility of Gabriele d'Annunzio, insurgent Italian commander at Fiume, to the settlement of the Adriatic question reached between Italy and Jugo-Slavia at Rapallo, was announced at a session of the rectors of the Fiume regency summoned by the commander. The reasons why the settlement was objectionable were set forth at length in a communique, which read:

"The Government of the Italian regency of Quernero is unable to recognize the right of the delegates who met at Rapallo to determine the confines of the regency without the admission of delegates from that regency.

"The regency, therefore, decides that the findings of the Rappallo conference are unacceptable and illegal. This Government holds:

"First: The regency was inaugurated so as to make the annexation of Fiume to Italy a certainty;

"Second: The people of Fiume, in their charter of liberty, confirmed their vote of October, 1918, which declared their complete dedication to the mother country;

"Third: To-day Fiume again confirms that vote and purposes to continue to fight until the fulfillment of its legitimate vote;

"Fourth: Meanwhile the confines of Italy can only be fixed as extending along the Julian Alps to Nevaso and Bitoria and to the sea at the Promentory of San Marco, which was always kept as the Venetian confines of the regency.

"Fifth—The confines should be determined by the historic Napoleonic line;

"Sixth—The confines of Fiume can only be drawn by extending the line beyond Susak and Tersatto, from which Fiume derives her water and light, and which cannot remain in the hands of the Jugo-Slavs;

"Seventh—Contiguity between the soil of the Fatherland and the regency from Nevaso can only be understood as the common confines of the ancient Istrian Province from the Julian Alps to the sea."

Meanwhile d'Annunzio is calling councils of war, and proceeding with the occupation of territory ceded to the Jugo-Slavs by the Rapallo agreement.

FLAG INCIDENT CONDEMNED

How Best Americans View Burning of Union Jack.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The New York Tribune published Monday morning numerous letters from United States citizens couched in terms of protest against the recent indignities according the British flag by Irish Nationalists in this city during Armistice week celebrations. Under the caption, "a local Sinn Fein outrage," the Tribune supports the angry protests of its readers in the following editorial.

"The act of these Sinn Feiners was an indefensible outrage alike upon every decency of memorial sentiment and upon every obligation of courtesy due a friendly power.

"We do not think Englishmen will at all mistake the source of this act. The American friendship for England was never so broadly based and clear-eyed as to-day. If we are aware of English mistakes and shortcomings — comparable to our own mistakes and shortcomings — we are equally sure of the underlying common cause of justice and right and democratic faith which the English-speaking nations of the world all share. Such an insult to the flag of Great Britain could not come from any true American.

"The Sinn Fein hand turned against an Armistice-Day flag was, as one of our readers notes, typical of Sinn Fein in the great war. On this day, when Americans assembled to commemorate an occasion hallowed by the sacrifices of American soldiers in a common cause with Great Britain and France, with all democracy against all autocracy, all that these Sinn Fein minds could think of was their own grievance. So it was in the war. Many Irishmen, south as well as north, suffered from no such petty egoism and united their all in the great fight. But not Sinn Fein. That trampled flag on Broadway is a wholesome reminder of an historic selfishness that can never be forgotten."

MAY CONTROL 'COAL.

Government Takes Action to Keep Down the Price.

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—Provincial fuel administrators, under the terms of an order of the Railway Board issued Monday, are given the power, subject to the approval of the Government of the province, to fix and determine in case of need, the maximum prices at which any or all classes or grades of fuel may be distributed and sold within a municipality. This action has been deemed necessary owing to the coal situation in some communities from which complaints have been received as to the prices charged.

A survey is being made this week of outlying points with a view to determining just where there may be any serious shortage. The survey is being made with particular reference to Ontario, but the Maritime Provinces are also being covered. The information secured will be given to the Provincial Governments.

Home Rule Bill In Lords.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The House of Lord on Monday read the home rule bill for the first time. November 23 has been fixed for the second reading, when its rejection will be moved by Lord Dunraven.

The power situation in Toronto is relieved.

Intercollegiate rules will govern the Dominion football series semifinal game between Torontos, O.R.F.U. champions, and Argonauts, Big Four champions.

Revolt at Budapest.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—According to a despatch from Vienna to the Sunday Herald, a revolt of workers has broken out at Budapest. Troops supporting the regime of Admiral Horthy, the Hungarian regent, are occupying all public buildings.

Saturday morning, it was reported, desultory fighting was in progress in Budapest, and the whole city was declared to be on the verge of anarchy with a large part of the population in flight. The establishment of a military dictatorship was given as the cause of the revolt.

CATTLE MARKETS

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Nov. 16.—With one of the heaviest runs of the season in cattle—around 6,800 head—the market for practically all classes at the Union Yards yesterday was in the earlier stages mighty slow and dragging. Later in the day it picked up a little, but at that was from 25c to 50c lower than a week ago.

There was another heavy run of western cattle of fair average quality, and the buyers naturally took advantage of the situation to get the cattle at lower prices.

Good to choice medium weight butcher steers and heifers also felt the decline, although the salesmen made a big effort to hold them around last week's prices.

Taken on the whole, and considering the very heavy run, the market must be regarded as fairly satisfactory.

With a run of 4,343 sheep and lambs yesterday the market was very strong. Choice lambs sold from 13c to 13½c; culls, 8c to 10c.

The sheep market was firm choice light weights selling from 8c to 9¼c; good sheep from 7c to 7½c; heavy sheep, 6½c to 7c; culls, 3c to 5c.

With a light run of calves—about 260—the market was strong on the good veal; choice veal, 18c to 18½c; heavy calves, fat, 8c to 11c; heavy calves, grassers, 5c to 7c.

The hog market was steady at from 15¼c to 15½c f.o.b., and a few choice lots to outside buyers at 15¾c.

WINNIPEG CATTLE MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 16.—Receipts, 5,000 cattle, 225 hogs and 485 sheep. Trading was slow generally, but a few sales were completed at steady prices. Good to choice female butchers $6 to $7.50; medium to good butcher steers, $6.50 to $8.50.

Sheep and lamb market was a shade stronger, good lambs reaching $9, with good mutton sheep selling up to $6. Packers were bidding $15.50 for selects on the hog market to-day.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Receipts, 39,000; unevenly lower; most steers butcher cattle, stockers and feeders 25c to 50c lower; few loads of choice, long-fed steers and good, choice yearlings escaping declines; top yearlings, $17.25; top heavy steers, $17; bulk natives, $9.75 to $13.75; bulk western steers, $8.25 to $10; butcher cows mostly $5 to $7.25; canners 25c lower; heavy calves off more.

Hogs—Receipts, 28,000; opened 15c to 25c higher; later mostly 10c to 15c higher; closing with most of the advance lost; top early, $13.25; hard to beat, $13 late; bulk, $12.40 to $13.10; pigs mostly 35c to 50c higher; bulk desirable, 100 to 130-lb. pigs, $12.85 to $13.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 31,000; fat lambs closed active; general market steady to 25c lower; top western lambs, $12.50; bulk native, $11.50 to $12.25; fat sheep steady; top ewes, light, $5.75; bulk natives, $5 to $5.50; feeders steady; top feeder lambs, $13.

Refuses to Quit Fight.

EXETER, Nov. 16.—Rev. J. O. L. Spracklin preached to congregations which taxed the capacity of Main Street Methodist Church Sunday morning and the James Street Church at night.

Referring briefly to the shooting of Beverly Trumble, he declared that he did it in self-defence. No one, he said, could appreciate the strain he had been under during the last five months, not only in connection with his work, but on account of open threats made regarding his life, and numerous letters of the same nature. He intends to continue in the work. He is now resting, he said.

Cow Testing.

As was expected early in the spring, there has been a big increase in the number of farmers who are keeping records of the production of milk and fat of each cow in their herd. In the month of June, 1919, there were 1,044 herds, with 9,230 cows, recorded under the scheme of cow-testing as carried on and organized by the dairy branch; in June,

Plan to meet increased demand for milk by raising better Dairy Heifers.

1920, 1,814 herds, with 16,030 cows, were recorded. This is an increase of nearly 75 per cent. in the number of herds and cows recorded.

The largest increase is shown in the Province of Quebec, and is due to the hearty co-operation of the Provincial Department of Agriculture with the dairy branch in an extensive campaign among the farmers of Quebec to show them the value of individual records of each cow in the herd and to organize the work in that province. The decided success of the campaign is shown by the fact that the number of farmers keeping records in Quebec has been nearly trebled.

COLLEGE ATHLETICS

Why Agricultural College Students Need Physical Culture.

Brawn and Brain Work Well Together — Students Help to Direct In Sports—Building Up the Body for Later Usefulness.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

ATHLETICS at our College are being revolutionized and placed on a more stable basis than in the past.

Progressive colleges are coming to realize the supreme importance of bringing physical training to the front in educational work. College authorities are realizing that they are responsible for the ignorance among the alumni of the colleges, regarding the care of the body, as it is a well known fact that eighty per cent of graduates die from ten to thirty years before the age at which they should. They are also realizing that under the old method less than fifty per cent. of the students are engaged in any form of systematic or organized exercise. This is due to the fact that our colleges were, and some are as yet, fostering two classes—one class attends for social and athletic advantages, and the other attends largely for intellectual opportunities. The first class is inclined to neglect mental work and carry athletics to excess, while the second class is inclined to neglect physical training and carry mental efforts to excess. Neither class lives strictly hygienic lives.

Now our colleges are adopting new methods to eliminate such conditions and are awakening to the fact that physical education has a legitimate place in the college curriculum,

Some of these methods are as follows: (1) Intra-collegiate sport and recreation in addition to our inter-collegiate sports, with the constant purpose in view of usefulness in after life. This draws in the spectators on the side lines and promotes interest by friendly rivalry. (2) Organization of activities on the basis of athletic sports, rather than on gymnatic basis, giving games to the student if normal physically; if not, remedial gymnatics until fit. It is necessary to have a wide range of sports, games, and physical activties, and a plan to encourage more general participation in them. (3) Exercise taken systematically and at regular intervals. (4) A subject with required attendance. (5) Strength test upon entering and at the end of each year, so a student may realize the benefit of systematic training. (6) Encouragement of the type of physical exercise that a student is likely to use in after life. (7) The teaching of fundamental principals of hygienic living. (8) Increase of facilities for outdoor sports in winter and summer.

In the past years athletics at the O. A. C. have been carried on without these advantages and, in spite of great difficulties, we have been handicapped primarily in not having an athletic field, and necessary funds for equipment which is essential for executing an effective program; this is our greatest need and will be a hinderance to our progressive program for this year. It is our great desire that it will not be long before we benefit by both.

The whole student body had a meeting before final examinations on the thirtieth of last March for the purpose of discussing and voting on the new program for the coming year which was outlined by our athletic executive. Professors Blackwood, Toole, and Crowe, and Dr. Creelman pointed out to the students and faculty the great need of such a program and their duty in regard to athletics and themselves. After a discussion, each cause of this program was voted on and passed unanimously by the whole student body.

The following is a brief outline of the Athletic Program for the coming year:—

(1) Students who have had previous training to act as leaders in the different branches of sports—to coach in boxing, wrestling, aquatics, and track and instruct in athletic games.

(2) Promote a fuller program of inter-year athletics by having schedules in more branches of sports: Inter-year competitions in the following sports: Rugby, soccer, play ground ball, push ball, volley ball, outdoor basket ball, boxing and wrestling, track, mass athletic meets, cross country runs, tug of war, tennis and aquatics.

(3) For those students who do not take part in these sports, two compulsory periods a week will be given in which they will be instructed in athletic games, field and indoor events, swimming, boxing and wrestling.

In order to promote this program, we had to enlarge on our Athletic Council which was composed of the sports managers, picked from the faculty, and the Athletic Executive. To this we added a Leaders Corp and Managers of inter-year sports picked from the students. The Leaders Corp is made up of directors of sports (one for each sport) and their leaders. The inter-year managers (one for each sport) have charge of the coaching and managing of their teams and are responsible to their year representative who is a member of the executive.

By such an organization we feel confident of swinging our program successfully, which means every student will take part in some branch of athletics. Those students, who come under clause (3) of our program, will be given special instruction by our Leaders Corp and will greatly benefit themselves and the college. In this way we will be able to reach the student on the side lines.

Suggestions regarding athletics in rural community centres will be presented in a future article.—K. W. Forman, Director of Athletics, O. A. College, Guelph.

Superstitions Regarding Honey Bee.

In almost every one of the country villages in England odd superstitions with regard to bees still survive. Among cottage folk, it is said that the bees should always be told when a death occurs in a family, and if this is not done they will be offended and desert the hive, says a writer in the London Graphic.

The method employed for telling the death is for someone closely related to the recently-deceased person to take the key of the house, rap it three times on the hive-board, inform the bees of the melancholy event, and tie a band of crape round the hive.

Bees, it is said, will never make much honey for a quarrelsome family. To dream of bees busily working is a good omen, for it is supposed to foretell prosperity and wealth through one's own industry. To dream of being stung by a bee is, however, unfortunate, as it means that the dreamer should beware of a faithless friend or lover.

THE LATE SOWN WHEAT

IT OUGHT TO BE WELL FERTILIZED.

Ready Nourishment Offsets Decrease In Temperature and Hastens Root Growth, Thus Insuring Good Stand In Fall and Healthy Crop Next Summer — Dodging Injury Done by the Hessian Fly.

Some are wise and some are not so wise! Some have sown their wheat early, and some delayed till early in October, in the hope that they may escape the ravages of the destructive Hessian fly. This fly hatches out two broods—one in April, the other late in August or early in September. If your wheat was sown late in August and is well up early in Sepember, the chances are that you have provided a splendid bait for the Hessian fly. This insect lays its eggs on the crown of the wheat. The eggs hatch out in a short time into whiteish maggots which eat into the first joint of the wheat. Here they pass the winter in the flag seed stage. When spring growth is well under way and the heads begin to show, you will notice, as this year, that many of the heads turn white and drop over. This was because the Hessian fly had destroyed the undergrowth of the grain-bearing stalk and starved the kernel.

Late sown wheat comes along at a time after the fall brood of the Hessian fly has deposited its eggs, hence late sown wheat is not attacked. But the late sown wheat has to face other and perilous conditions. Frequently very little top growth is accomplished before killing frosts stop further progress. A delay in seeding means a decided decrease in growing temperature. For instance, the 35-year average temperature in Ontario for September and October show a difference of 11 degrees in favor of September and eight degrees more in favor of August. Now with this decrease in temperature, there comes a slowing down of growing processes, a deadening of the bacterial cessation of growth. These undesirable conditions have to be met as far as possibe by supplying the crop with ready nourishment in the form of soluble fertiliezrs. Such nutritious plant food immediately helps the growing crop and, in many cases, although the top growth never reaches the abundance of top that is produced on early sown wheat, yet the rooting of fertilized wheat is much more expansive and stronger than that of unfertilzed. What an advantage this is when the alternate frosts and thaws of early spring heave the wheat! Where the unfertilized wheat is readily torn by the heaving of the surface soil, the fertilized wheat, by virtue of its prolific root growth, is more firmly attached to the soil. Even if two or three of the roots are torn off, many more remain to feed the temporarily injured plant.

Some practical farmers may be inclined to approve of the argument but pass up the actual application. However, actual proof is by no means scarce. We have met thousands of farmers within the last three weeks at the two largest exhibitions held in Canada; at least 100 of these men have reported that their fall wheat which was fertilized a year ago came through the winter strong and vigorous—and what was more important, it showed very little injury from the Hessian fly, while the strips which they had left unfertilized through the same field, were absolutely riddled with this pest. There is no practical means known of treating the Hessian fly with poisons. The very fact that the insect feeds on the inner part of the plant precludes this treatment. The only available method to combat the attacks of the fly is to sow late and fertilize abundantly so as to hasten the growth of the late sown crop, and give partially infected crops strength to withstand the injury.

At the present time farmers in certain sections are appealing to Parliament to set a price of $3.00 per bushel on wheat, claiming that such a price will not any more than recompense them for their labor and provide a reasonable profit on investment. Whether or not their argument is good does not interest us at this point, but the very fact that they place such a high value on wheat shows the necessity of using every reasonable precaution to insure a good stand this fall and a satisfactory crop next summer. It costs very little more to handle a field that yields from 35 to 45 bushels per acre than it does to plant and harvest a field which yields little more than 10 bushels per acre, 200 lbs. of fertilizer per acre, analysing from two to three per cent. ammonia, eight to twelve per cent. potash where necessary, represents an investment of little more than $6.00 per acre. This means that an increase of two bushels of wheat at the farmer's own valuation pays for the fertilization—the rest is clear gain.

If your wheat is already sown and you have not fertilised it, plenty of time remains this fall to give it a top-dressing of a couple of hundred pounds of fertiliser per acre. This can be applied broadcast or through the fertilizer dropping compartment of the grain drill. Possibly some would sooner wait until next spring and top-dress the wheat as soon as the ground is sufficiently dry. Either practice is proper. An argument in favor of fall application might be that the fertilizer has longer to work and will help in producing a more vigorous root growth.

Hundreds of farmers are convinced that fertilizers on wheat pay — not only in the wheat crop itself, but in the insurance of a good grass and clover catch.

Not a Losing Proposition.

Although wool prices declined to some extent this season, farmers should not be too anxious to go out of the sheep business. A fair-sized flock of sheep on the average farm will never be a losing proposition.

CATTLE FOR SOUTH AMERICA.

Conditions In Argentina Favorable for Dairying.

Sales of pure-bred live stock in South America amounting to about $400,000 have been made during the past six months, according to a report from the United States Department of Agriculture, under date of July 3. Credit for a large part of these sales is attributed by the Department to the work of two live stock commissioners sent down by the Bureau of Markets to promote this trade in pure-bred live stock. News has come that two more live stock commissioners have recently sailed for South America to follow up the work of last year and make new contracts and develop a market for all breeds of pure-bred live stock. To carry on this work, the Bureau of Markets is considering the establishing of a permanent office in South America in charge of an agricultural commissioner. It must be understood that a large part of this South American trade for years to come will undoubtedly be in pure-bred breeding stock. Dairying is thus far relatively a minor industry. The great ranches and expanses of pasture land make the raising of beef very logical. However, there is a definite growth in demand for dairy breeding stock, and, from present indications, the Holstein breed has the call. Some importations in the past has been made from Holland direct, but on account of the foot and mouth disease trouble there, importations from that source are now cut off, and the prospective breeders are naturally turning to this country. One breeder from the Argentine, who has already done splendid work with animals of Holland breeding, is now in the United States and expects within the next two months to purchase about $50,000 worth of pure-bred Holsteins. He reports the natural conditions in his country as very favorable for dairying, and especially with Holsteins. After the Holstein breed becomes a little more firmly established in those countries, we shall undoubtedly experience a demand from that source which will be no small factor in the Holstein market. It is up to us now to take care that a proper foundation is laid, to see to it that those breeders who come here and put their confidence in us get the full value received for their purchases—that they get healthy animals that will make good and insure their coming back to us for future business. As a matter of fact, a heavy responsibility devolves upon every breeder who makes a sale into a pioneer territory, and for the good of the whole industry, we cannot any of us take this thought home to ourselves too strongly.—Holstein-Friesian World.

Successful Fattening Pen.

A successful fattening coop is herewith illustrated. The sides are slatted so the birds may have plenty of fresh air. After each meal is eaten a muslin curtain should be thrown over the coop, which will place the stock in semi-darkness and at the same time admit sufficient fresh air. If the floor is also slatted the coops will remain in a cleaner condition, as the manure has a chance to drop through between the slats.

Keep Chicken House Clean.

Keep your house and coops clean at all times and spray the roosts and floors with kerosene oil and dust the nests with tobacco dust to prevent lice and mites infesting the house and coops and sapping all the profits of the business by pestering the hens and chickens.

AN HISTORIC BLUNDER

NOVA SCOTIA HAS ANCIENT COAT OF ARMS.

Charles I. Granted Original Design to Little Scottish Colony, But by Some Mistake It Was Not Adopted at the Time of Confederation, and Nova Scotians Are Now Agitating For Its Restoration.

THE Nova Scotia historical societies are interesting themselves in a movement for the restoration of the original armorial bearings of that province in place of those adopted at Confederation. Most Canadians are unaware that in 1621 King James I. of England, and VI. of Scotland, as King of Scotland, and purely as a Scottish measure, granted to Sir William Alexander (afterwards Earl of Stirling) the territory now forming the whole of the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, and parts of Quebec and of the present State of Maine, on the sole condition of paying "annually "one penny of Scottish money, if so much be demanded," the purpose of the grant being that Sir William might carry out a project he had in mind of making of this vast territory a New Scotland in America, as there was already a New England and a New France.

The story of Sir William Alexander and his efforts to carry out his great project is beside our present purpose. It all came to little enough at the time, but bore fruit as we know long after. Royal encouragement to the scheme given by King James was continued and amplified by his son and successor, Charles I., and among other marks of favor the last named sovereign made a grant of arms to Nova Scotia in these terms: Silver, a cross of St. Andrew blue with an inescutcheon of the Royal Arms of Scotland. Crest, on a wreath a bunch of laurel and a thistle issuing from two hands, the one hand being in armor and the other naked. Supporters, on the dexter side the royal unicorn silver, horned, maned, and hoofed gold, imperially crowned, gorged with an open crown and chain affixed thereto and reflexed over the back fold. On the sinister side a savage man proper. Motto (over the crest) "Munit haec et altera vincit." The shield of Scotland, blue, with a white cross of St. Andrew, was thus, counter-changed to white with a blue cross for New Scotland.

Later, as a separate act, the baronets of Nova Scotia were given the privilege of using this same shield, with its inescutcheon as their badge or coat of arms. An idea got abroad somehow that the shield was theirs primarily, and only "borrowed" by the province for its sea, etc., when in later times "Nova Scotia" became a reality. The shield, however, belongs primarily and by royal authority to the country and not to the Knights Baronet of Nova Scotia. Its use by their Order was a different matter altogether, and with quite different concomitants.

But the mistake referred to accounts no doubt in some measure for what took place in relation to the provincial coat of arms at the time of Canadian Confederation. The ancient arms were then found "in possession" in this province. They were displayed in the doors of the Provincial Building, and are to be seen there still, and in the old Great Seal of the province. But at the time of Confederation the origin and authority of these arms had been forgotten. It was thought that the province had little ground for using armorial bearings which (as was supposed) belonged in reality to an order of baronets. The record was not looked for in the right place, namely, in the Lyon Office in Edinburgh, were it might have been found, and so the College of Heralds in London, supposing no doubt that the field was clear, proceeded to prepare arms and a new seal for Nova Scotia as a province of the Dominion of Canada, not moved thereto by the provincial authorities of the day, but in opposition to their wishes. The new Great Seal was received in December, 1869, but was neither welcomed nor adopted nor proclaimed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, but pigeonholed, and left unused for years afterwards.

If the provincial authorities had known the strength of the case for the old arms it is reasonable to suppose that they would have held out stoutly against any change, but they gave way at length and allowed the matter to go by default in favor of the new order.

But even then the ancient arms did not go wholly out of memory. The shield is still to be seen, not only on the old office doors in the Provincial Building, but on odd pieces of jewelry of much later date, and the full achievement appears on the Bank of Nova Scotia $10 notes, of the issue of January 2, 1919! In this last case the Indian sinister supporter is shown in a sitting posture and the unicorn charging around the dexter side of the shield—the shield itself is of a shape characteristic of the period of debased heraldry and is wrongly marked red! All these details are wrong, but the interesting fact remains that in casting about for a suitable design for its notes the Bank of Nova Scotia selected the ancient rather than the modern arms of the province. The historical societies of Nova Scotia now ask the rectification of the blunder committed when the ancient and lawful arms of Nova Scotia were supplanted by a new and commonplace design of a salmon and thistles.—L. M. Fortier, in Toronto Saturday Night.

THAT HUDSON BAY PORT

ANCIENT DISPUTE STILL REMAINS UNSETTLED.

Some Westerners Declare That Fort Churchill Is Much Better Adapted to an Harbor Than Port Nelson—It Is Asserted by Critics That Millions Have Been Thrown Into the Mud Uselessly at the Latter Point.

THE ancient tragedy of Henry Hudson and his son, having been set afloat in an open boat and abandoned in Hudson Bay, by mutinous seamen, is not the only tragedy connected with this historic inland sea of our Canadian north, says Bert Huffman in the Grain Growers' Guide.

If you could ride over the Hudson Bay Railway line with me to Milepost 214, then on a gasoline speeder to Kettle Rapids, milepost 333, then by canoe and "hiking" on a good trail for 92 miles to the mouth of Nelson River, I could show you a more monstrous tragedy than the first.

In the original tragedy only half-a dozen or so of men suffered. In the modern tragedy, being enacted in the clay-mud at Nelson "harbor," the entire people of Canada are to suffer untold burdens of taxation, because of the wanton and criminal waste of money going on there in a weak and futile attempt to make a harbor in the mud flats, while a perfectly good rock-bottom harbor exists at Fort Churchill, 180 miles north by water, 100 miles north by land, so declares Mr. Huffman.

There you have the opinion of Mr. Huffman, who has been one of the champions of the claims of Fort Churchill against those of Port Nelson. Never has there been a more bitter debate than is going on regarding the rival rights of these two ports. People in Eastern Canada may not hear a great deal about it, but occasionally an echo like Mr. Huffman's article reaches us. Some engineers have recommended Fort Churchill and others prefer Port Nelson. Which shall it be? Is either as good as its friends claim? Is either as bad as its enemies assert? We cannot tell at this distance. Still it is interesting to hear what Mr. Huffman in his bitter attack has to say on the subject.

Aside from the cost of the railway line, almost, if not quite, $10,000,000 has been expended in the harbor mud, and it will require twenty years to build a harbor there, if it is at all possible, and will require constant and heavy dredging to keep it clear of the millions of cubic yards of clay carried down by the river annually. That is another charge launched by Mr. Huffman.

Of course, the C.P.R. will lose some traffic in the diversion of western grain by this short-cut to market, he continues. And, of course, the Hudson Bay Company, with its 250-year record of spotless virtue in the northern fastnesses, will lose its strangle-hold on trade and transportation in the out-of-the-way places, when once this line is completed. So, if the western farmer can stop and put two and two together, he will begin to understand the temptation to delay the Hudson Bay Railway line and harbor.

At Fort Churchill the granite rock blasted out for elevator sites could have been used in breakwaters, cribbing, retaining walls and other necessary features of the harbor, thus shortening and cheapening the construction. At Nelson the Government is attempting to build an artificial island on a mud foundation, the island to be itself constructed of mud dredged out of the river. One attempt failed and another site for the "island" was established 4,000 feet further out in the mud, and there the jumbled, bungling, unscientific job has stopped. A steel bridge was to connect the island with the mainland, and the entire immense and spectacular terminal site was to sit on a mud foundation. It will be noted that the enemies of Nelson talk a lot about the mud.

Nelson is unsheltered, open, flat and bleak — when the tide is out nothing more than a wide, shallow delta of mud. The wind whips it from every quarter, and when the tide is out an ordinary vessel must anchor miles out at sea.

Churchill is not perfect, but it is sheltered, ribbed by solid granite, there is 60 to 70 feet of water in the harbor, with no wide delta to fill with mud, and with everlasting solid foundations for elevators, and only a narrow neck of channel to dredge.

By diverting the present line, or by building a new line from somewhere near Split Lakes, Churchill can yet be utilized and made ready to load the prairie wheat within two years. By energetic direction is could be ready for the 1922 crop—but Nelson? Well, if a cargo of wheat is shipped out of that port within seven or eight years, the judgment of hundreds of honest and competent men is far, far amiss.

Here is Mr. Huffman's final verdict, with which the engineers who support Port Nelson will doubtless disagree:

The sentiment in the north is almost unanimously in favor of Fort Churchill. Ask any honest-minded business man in The Pas what he thinks of Port Nelson, and he throws up his hands in utter disgust and replies: "It is such a pity, such a pity—it can never be a harbor. They are simply casting the people's treasure into the mud, never to be recovered."

I hear it everywhere—on railroads, on boats, in hotels, on canoe routes, on portages, in mining-shafts, in sawmill bunk houses. I have visited and sounded every possible source of public sentiment in the north, and it is all one loud, vehement cry in favor of Churchill.

Aerial Taxicabs.

Seventeen aerial taxicab companies are being formed in Western Canada, and a number of these have already been licensed by the air board. Four commercial flying companies have been formed at Winnipeg, and there are companies at Regina, Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Hanna (Alberta), Calgary, Lethbridge, Banff and in Vancouver. Airdromes are to be built at Virden and Vancouver. Passenger flying is the first object of these companies, and mail carrying and distribution for large shops are expected to follow.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

May Pass the Critical Period Safely and Comfortably by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Regina, Sask.—"I was going through Change of Life and suffered for two years with headache, nervousness, sleepless nights and general weakness. Some days I felt tired and unfit to do my work. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and found good results, and I also find it a very helpful Spring tonic and useful for constipation from which I suffer much. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to several friends, and am willing you should publish this."—Mrs. MARTHA W. LINDSAY, 810 Robinson St., Regina, Sask.

If you have warning symptoms such as a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backache, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness, inquietude, and dizziness, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begin taking the medicine at once. We know it will help you as it did Mrs. Lindsay.

SEEKING REPTILES.

Scientific Expedition In Valley of Red River.

Another expedition to look for the bones of great prehistoric reptiles in the Red River valley of Alberta is now at work. This time it is under the direction of Dr. W. A. Parks, of the University of Toronto and the Royal Ontario Museum.

For a number of years these expeditions have been an annual summer journey for three months. Two years ago the almost perfect specimen of the kritosaurus incurvimanus, which has just been finally chipped free from the rock and presented to the museum, was found, making a distinct addition to the records of science and giving to Toronto the only specimen of the species yet discovered.

Three incomplete skeletons of the kritosaurus and a great horned head of a brontosaurus, 4 feet 6 inches in length, were found by the professor, but have ot yet been carved from the rock. It is the hope of Prof. Parks to collect ultimately for the Royal Ontario Museum one of the finest exhibits of dinosaurs in existance.

The locality and the method of finding the specimens are described by Prof. Parks. "The river cuts right through a flat prairie to a depth of 400 feet, forming a whole lot of broken buttes, and it is among these that the bones are discovered. One of the difficulties in obtaining complete specimens is that the bones cannot be obtained until they are partly exposed by the action of natural deroding causes. Sometimes you are disappointed then, for after exploring you may find only a single bone. You dig down as close as you can and pack the rock in plaster of paris for shipment."

The Red River valley 3,000,000 years ago was near the coast of a great inland sea that stretched from the Gulf of Mexico to the Arctic Ocean. "The sand along the shallow, brackish shores of this great body of water formed a splendid preservative for those huge reptiles which inhabited the world at that time. Our kritosaurus was found in what we call the Belly river formation of the Upper Cretacean system," explains Prof. Parks.

In earlier days, when large portions of the country were covered with forests and there were few roads, travel was often possible only by way of paths "blazed" through the woods. To blaze, as every woodsman knows, is to strike off a chip from the sides of trees, so that the line of marks shall indicate the direction of the trail.

In blazing for a path small trees were marked, but in blazing for the bounds of a lot or town or for a farm line larger trees were usually selected, the blaze being made about breast high. When, however, as was often the case, the blazing was done in winter on deep snow by men traveling on snowshoes, the mark was necessarily higher up. When such a line is traveled in the summer, especially after some years, during which the trees have grown, the marks are sometimes found high up on the trunks and are likely to escape the eye of the inexperienced. As many of them will also be partially overgrown the task of the surveyor who goes over one of these old lines is not always easy.

If the boundary line passes to the left of a tree selected for blazing the cut is made upon the right side. If the line goes to the left the tree is blazed upon the left side.

In running a boundary line at a corner, where two lines come together, either a "monument" is erected—a stake supported by four boulders—or a tree is blazed on all four sides to indicate as clearly as possible the turning point of the line.

The permanency of the record made by blazing trees is quite remarkable. It is a matter of fact that in many case of disputed lines or boundaries of lots in forest lands the courts have held the records of the blazes as sufficient and reliable, where carefully drawn plans and formally attested title deeds have been set aside. The wound of a blazed tree heals over, but never so completely that the scar may not be readily recognized by the experienced woodsman, hence it follows that so long as the blazed tree escapes fire and the axe of the lumberman so long it remains a faithful record of the line as surveyed.

Blazed trees also fix dates almost as accurately as they preserve boundaries. The outer shell which has grown over scar is cut away, and the rings in the wood beneath the bark testify to the number of years which have elapsed since the blaze was made.

Napanee Musical and Literary Society.

The Napanee Musical and Literary Society will open the season Thursday evening, November 25th at 8 p.m. with a Lecture-Recital by Carlos Buhler, the celebrated South African pianist. Meeting is open to club members only. In case of any open meetings seats will be reserved for club members until ten minutes of eight. The next meeting will be December 7th, when Rev. Robert White will give his popular lecture, "Across Canada with a Scotchman."

Robert Brown Dead.

There passed away at the home of his son, D. L. Brown, Deseronto, on Nov. 2nd, Robert Brown, an interesting an well-known figure in Sudbury for the past twelve years, at the advanced age of seventy-eight. Deceased's parents settled in Marlbank and later moved to Deseronto, where for forty years Mr. Brown was foreman of the Rathbun Lumber Co. His wife predeceased him nearly ten years ago, and since he has spent his summers in Sudbury with his sons and winter in Belleville and Napanee with married daughters. Three sons and three daughters survive, Mrs. C. W. Moat, Toronto; Mrs. R. R. Wales, Napanee; Mrs. Fred Russell, Napanee; Messrs. D. L. and Edward Brown, of Sudbury; and Frank, Sault Ste. Marie.

An Extra Fine Lecture.

Those who attended the lecture in the Historical Hall on Friday evening last were well rewarded. Brig. Gen. Ross had a message to deliver that ought to be of great interest to all Canadians. Few appreciate the adverse local conditions under which the Army Medical Corps carried on and few understand the wonderful results attained. This was all made clear by the lecturer who is the one person more than any other responsible for the many improvements in the service. It is most gratifying to the vast army of Red Cross workers at home to know that their work was appreciated and that without their co-operation the corps could not have taken the proud stand it did. The General did not arrogate to himself the credit for the fact that Canada led all nations of the world in the equipment, organization and actual service in France, but it is conceded that his practical common sense and disregard of red tape was the greatest factor in bringing about that end.

Winter Evening "At Homes."

The first of a series of winter evening "At Homes," arranged and carried out by the ladies and young men of St. Patrick's church took place in the Parish Hall, on Monday evening last. The weather was all that could be desired, and as a consequence a large number from town and country filled the hall to capacity. Progressive euchre, music and dancing was entered into with a splendid enthusiasm, and the result was a thoroughly enjoyable evening. The purpose or object of these "At Homes" is to raise some funds to replenish the library established some years ago by the pastor, Father O'Connor, and which has done untold good, morally and spiritually. Good reading is absolutely necessary at all times, but especially in the world to-day, for the proper formation of christian character. Good reading with practical lessons and lofty ideals establish in man a determination to know himself better, and the end for which "Good" and "Evil," "Virtue and vice are to-day struggling for the mastery it is well to remember that many youths, of both sexes, have learned the first lessons in the dark mysteries of moral depravity from the pages of sentimental, sensational, and salacious books and magazines. To counteract this is the duty of every christian parent, teacher, and minister, for the danger of those highly seasoned novels, which may be agreeable to a morbid appetite, only defile the imagination and enfeeble the mind. As an encouragement to emulate the Master we can recall the promised share in the reward expressed in his own words, "they that instruct others unto justice will shine like stars for all eternity."

Armistice Night Concert.

Those who were fortunate enough to be present at the concert of sacred music held in St. Mary Magdalene's church, on Armistice Night, will long remember it as one of the rarest ever heard in Napanee. The entire programme was given by Kingston artists, of whom the most outstanding was Master Peter Fair, the boy soloist from St. George's Cathedral. Master Peter ordinarily may be no more angelic than other young boys but as his glorious soprano voice rang through the church the audience was held spellbound. His selections were all delightful, but perhaps those most enthusiastically mentioned were Geoffrey O'Hara's "There is No Death," and "In a Garden," with its charming violin obligato. The other artists were no less accomplished, but Master Peter was the sensation house a boy soprano is unique in Napanee. Mr. Robert Harvey's magnificient bass voice was heard to great advantage, and was especially good in the stirring "Flander's Fields," and the very lovely setting of "Canada's Reply" and Master Howard Fair's violin number was well executed and sweet and sympathetic. The selections were all chosen with a view to the armistice anniversary, and each one seemed to carry some special message and meaning of its own for that wonderful day. Napanee certainly owes a debt of gratitude to the Kingston artists for this memorable Armistice Night. We are glad to be able to announce that it is not long before Master Peter Fair and his brother may be heard in Napanee again, as they are to sing on the evening of December 3rd at the entertainment in connection with the bazaar given by the C. W. G. of St. Mary Magdalene church.

BEASTS AND WONDERS.

How Our Forefathers' Legs Were Pulled.

The natural history of our forbears, particularly that which concerns beasts and birds, was wild and wonderful. Not only was a considerable part of it obviously not founded upon observation, but invention, rumor, and a quite irresponsible fancy were given full play. Often enough the impression of a credulous gentleman with a note-book having his leg pulled by a group of countrymen in a village alehouse. One can understand that the wilder the stories the better in the case of legendary or "exorbitant" beasts, such as the unicorn or the cockatrice, but where the creatures were the common objects of the countryside, and part, as it were, of daily life, one wonders exceedingly.

Consider such natural histories as were current in the Elizabethan age and well on into the seventeenth century. Some of these were translations from the Latin of Friar Bartholomew, Albertus Magnus, and, of course, Pliny. Others, such as Topsell's "Four-footed Beasts," were compilations. The work of Friar Bartholomew was probably the best known. One gathers that he rejected little and, apparently, quotioned nothing that came his way. Obvious absurdities are gravely set down. Let us take as illustrations a few points concerning those familiar creatures, the hedgehog and the goat. The hedgehog, we are told, climbs trees and shakes down apples. Then he "walloweth" upon them, so attaching them to his spines, and, carries his booty home to his waiting family.

Topsell remarks, "There is a story told of hatred between the hare and the hedgehog, for a hare was seen to pluck off the pricks from the hedgehog, and leave her bald, peeled, and naked, without any defence." Certainly a wonderful story. And one seems to recognize the versatile hedgehog again when we read: "And a certain beast sucketh goat's milk of the udder and teats, and then the milk is destroyed and wasted, and the goat waxeth blind thereof." A Surrey laborer once assured me that he had seen a hedgehog engaged in this singular operation, but I did not believe him. For the hedgehog's mouth, on sound scientific authority, is incapable of such work.

Of the goat we are informed that he "breathes at the ears and not at the nose," and that when he is wounded "he eateth Dragon tea, and taketh so the arrow out of his body." There is some sort of truth in the statement that "the bite of a goat is deadly to trees," because goats will, if they get the chance, nibble the bark round young trees; but why should they "die if they lick honey"? In these days, when goat-keeping is on the increase in England, it is deeply interesting to know that "if they lick serpents after these have cast their skin, they will not grow old, though they become white." But when it comes to the serpent, invention and legend run riot, and the best that can be said of him is that, dead, he has some virtue.

England 30,000 Years Ago.

What England looked like about 30,000 years ago, during the glacial period, was recently described by Mr. G. W. Lamplough, president of the Geological Society. The weather was alternately heavy, stormy, and calm, powerful floods, and low temperature in the valleys; while the seas round England were at a higher level than to-day. All the lower lands on the east had undergone great change since, but if a hill man of that period were resurrected he would probably be able to find his way about the high land of the country to-day without great difficulty. There was a great bay covering the whole of the Fen country, and the Mersey and the Dee had a common estuary, whilst a lot of Suffolk was submerged. "At one period this island was apparently about one-fifth the size. The elephant and rhinoceros at one time stalked the land. About 5,000 square miles of England vanished at one period, and the lecturer estimated that 20,000 square miles of the country were greatly modified by glaciation (action of huge icebergs), and 16,000 miles escaped erosion practically altogether.

End of Strange Case.

Word comes from St. Victoire, Quebec, that Napoleon Tremblay and Malvina Despatie, the two principals to the marriage annulment case, which has been before the Quebec courts and the Privy Council for years, had been remarried there. Napoleon Tremblay and Malvina Despatie were cousins, though their common ancestors lived over a century ago. They were married by a priest without a dispensation as required by the Roman Catholic Church. Upon the petition of the husband in 1912 first the church authorities and then the civil courts annulled the marriage on the ground that as the church law had been ignored it was void. The wife, on the strength of a fund subscribed by sympathizers in Montreal and Toronto, appealed against the annulment from the Superior Court to the Privy Council. The decision of the latter body is expected at any time. Recently Tremblay intimated to the parish priest at St. Ours, where his wife was born, that he was anxious to get a dispensation so that he could be regularly married to her.

Landmarks of Mackenzie

SINCE William Lyon Mackenzie King, the Liberal leader, has been visiting some of the shrines of his illustrious forebear, from whom he gets his Christian names, it is permissible for the average citizen, regardless of his politics, to do the same.

The remains of the rebel leader rest beneath the low spread branches of a mountain ash in the Necropolis in Toronto. Within a small plot, bordered by a hedge, four little stones, only a few inches high, mark a row of graves. One bears the word "Father" and below "William Lyon Mackenzie, next to it is a stone marked "William Lyon and George Mackenzie," and the fourth "Barbara and Helen." A substantial monument has been erected to William Lyon Mackenzie in the same God's acre where a granite shaft commemorates Lount and Matthews, two of his chief lieutenants, who gave up their lives for the faith they had in their leader and his cause.

Parts of the basement walls of the old Toronto Jail, in a cell of which Lount and Matthews were kept till their execution, are still traceable in the office building at the southeast corner of Toronto and Court streets.

From the Necropolis we pass to Bond street where at No. 82 stands the three-storey dwelling in which Mackenzie died. Toward the end of his strenuous life, which was one of almost continuous opposition to things as they were, some of the rebel leaders' friends, moved by sympathy for his condition, presented this property to him, though against his will, for his native Scottish independence never forsook him.

Here he spent his closing years—years of gloom and despair, it is said, and with a consciousness that he had not achieved all he sought in the realm of reform. After sixty-six years of strenuous struggle he passed away, and with his passing a page of Canadian history was closed.

As one sits at the old desk used by Mackenzie when a member of the Upper Canada Legislature (now preserved in the cabin of the York Pioneers in Exhibition Park), it is easy to conjure up the exciting scenes in which he figured and of his five successive expulsions from the old Front street chamber. It must be admitted that he drew fire as when he wrote that "the House was an assembly of sycophants" and the Government "a band of public robbers." "If a Government emanating from England can cherish such a corrupt star chamber crew (as the Family Compact), then the days of the infamous Scroggs and Jeffreys are returned upon us! They were tools of a servile power, official fungi more numerous and pestilential than the quagmires and marshes that encircle Toronto!"

No wonder there was a "come back" "William Lie-on Mackenzie" was a comparatively gentle rejoinder. He was, according to his enemies, a reptile, a spaniel dog, a seditious little liar, a firebrand, a political mountebank, a squip scribbler who began to feel his importance among small people and, like the frog in the fable, to swell with pomps and vanity.

Another Mackenzie reminder in Toronto still exists in the old Doel house, on the northwest corner of Adelaide and Bay streets. John Doel became associated with the leaders of "the Party of Reform." During the exciting days preceding the actual outbreak of the rebellion at the skirmish at Montgomery's Farm, the house was a rendezvous for Mackenzie sympathizers, while larger gatherings were held in the adjoining brewery where "The Canadian Alliance Society" was probably discussed if not formed, and other plans laid for the raising of an armed force, and where their leader no doubt frequently met with them.

Yet another visible reminder of Mackenzie is a pleasant one in his portrait, in the City Hall, as the first Mayor of Toronto, in 1834; indeed, as the first mayor ever elected in Upper Canada. It was during his year of office that the "little mountebank" proved to be a hero in personally risking his life during a cholera plague; in fact, he was stricken with the disease, but fought it successfully.

Among the Mackenzie relics in the John Ross Robertson collection in the Toronto Public Library are some of the military orders issued by Mackenzie and his rebel army, as well as the proclamation offering £1,000 for his capture. A curio in the Normal School Museum is a cane apparently given to Mackenzie by some political enemies in a spirit of irony, the lettering reading: "This vine was cut on Navy Island, C. W., after the Lion (Mackenzie) and his pirate followers fled to the boats on January 16, 1838, finding the grape of Canada too potent for their relish." (Signed) "HEMP."

More than one old Ontario farmhouse has legends of having given him sanctuary during his flight. A cave near Dundas is still pointed out as one of his hiding places, while, in the same town, the building which he once occupied—the Leslie House, has survived the passing of the years.

Queenston also holds a pathetic reminder of the turbulent Scot in the ruins of his old printing office, in which the Colonial Advocate was first printed and which so exasperated Sir Peregrine Maitland and all the Government rulers of the day, and, genially, a glimpse of Navy Island, in the upper Niagara, tells its story of the short-lived Provisional Government there set up by Mackenzie, ere he finally escaped to the American shore.

The Underground Railways carried during the past year nearly 1,400,000,000 passengers, which represent 200,000,000 more than in the previous year. It is computed that London to-day has probably more journeys per head of the population than any city in the world. The car and 'bus miles run are equivalent to 6,403 journeys round the world. The passengers carried represent roughly thirty times the population of the British Isles.

As many as 121,919 persons have paid admission to one championship football game in London.

FEEL'S THAT SHE'S DOING GOOD DEED

Toronto Woman Wants Others To Know What A Blessing Tanlac Has Been to Her.

"I am delighted with the results I have received from Tanlac, for I am once more enjoying life and health," said Mrs. Neil McNeill, of 65 Crawfod street, Toronto, Ont.

"I have been almost a constant sufferer for more than a yea from stomach trouble and nervousness. I couldn't eat much of anything, for my digestive organs wee so badly upset I was in distress after every meal. It was hard for me to retain anything on my stomach and I felt nauseated most of the time. Sickening headaches often came on me and I had to give right up and go to bed. My nerves were unstrung and at night I was always restless and many times wasn't able to get to sleep until early morning. My strength and energy seemed to leave me and most of the time I was too weak to do my housework. I did everything possible to get relief and even spent some time in the hospital but nothing seemed to help me.

"It was my husband who suggested that I try Tanlac, and I began to improve steadily right from the start. The nervousness and indigestion began leaving me and I commenced t oeat things I hadn't been able to touch. Today I call myself perfectly well and can do my housework all by myself. I eat just whatever I please and never suffer one bit afterwards. Those sickening headaches have disappeared and my nerves are so steady and quiet I sleep soundly al night long. I have told lots of people about Tanlac and I always feel I am doing a good deed every time I do it."

Tanlac is sold in Napanee at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON.

COMEDIANS OF CEMETERY.

Epitaphs Which Make Those Who Read Them Smile.

Collectors of tombstone literature with a penchant for comic epitaphs have plenty to choose from, says Tit-Bits.

So prevalent has become the custom of inscribing facetious doggerel on tombstones that authorities are trying to stop the practice by insisting that epitaphs shall in future be chosen from the Bible or standard Christian authors.

A typical example of the work of the churchyard comedians is to be seen in Oxford, where a tombstone bears this inscription:

Here lyeth John Crocker, a maker of bellows;
He's crafts-master and king of good-fellows.
Yet when he came to the hour of his death
He that made bellows could not make breath.

An epitaph in a Cornish churchyard tells us quaintly:

His end was thus—
He was run over by a 'bus.

From Cornwall, too, comes this one:

In this here grave you see before 'e
Lies berried up a desmal story;
A young maiden, she was crossed in love,
And tooken to the realm above;
But he that crossed her, I should say,
Deserves to go t'other way.

With an eye to the main chance, relatives have sometimes used the tombstone as an effective means of advertising. This example is to be seen in the churchyard at Pewsey, Wilts:

Beneath this stone in hope of Zion,
Is laid the landlord of "The Lion."
Resigned unto the Heavenly Will,
His son keeps on the business still.

Very mystifying is the inscription, "A virtuous woman is 5 - to her husband," to be found on a tombstone in a churchyard in Leigh, until it is explained that space prevented the word "a crown" being cut in full. The stonecutter therefore put "5 -," arguing that it was equal to a crown.

From Canterbury we have an example written by a sorrowing widower:

Of children she bore twenty-four
Thank the Lord there will be no more.

An inscription on an old tombstone in the churchyard of Winchester Cathedral points a moral in an amusing manner. It reads:

Here lies in peace a Hampshire grenadier
He caught his death by drinking cold small beer.
Soldiers, beware from his untimely fall!
And when you're hot, drink strong, or none at all.

And there is a warning in this one from Epsom:

Here lies I and two daughters,
All of us killed by the Cheltenham Waters;
If we had only stuck to Epsom Salts,
We shouldn't have been in these here vaults.

Thomas a' Beckett's Bones.

This year completing the seven hundredth anniversary of the translation of St. Thomas of Canterbury, the oft-argued question of the identity of his alleged bones is being revived. These relics are said to have had miraculous healing power, and so popular was the martyred primate that on the translation or removal of his body, 50 years after the martyrdom, Canterbury was crowded out and vast numbers of people slept in the surrounding fields. Dr. A. J. Mason, who has just completed a history of the discovery of the bones in a book issued by the Cambridge University Press, states that the most wonderful happening at St. Thomas' shrine was the penance of King Henry II.

Commodore F. W. Young, R.N. Is Wreck Raiser in Chief; Has Salvaged Many Ships

COMMODORE F. W. YOUNG R.N.R., the famous salvage expert, under whose supervision the Admiralty's great task of clearing war's wreckage from the seas is being done, is a big, genial man of strong, outstanding personality. A sailor by profession, he joined the Liverpool Salvage Association thirty-eight years ago. Wreck-raising has been his occupation ever since. He has followed it in all parts of the world, achieving so many notable successes that he has long been regarded as the most skilled practitioner engaged in this very difficult business.

On the day that war broke out Commodore Young was at Southampton with the liner Gothland, which he had just brought in from the Scillies under her own steam, although she had torn nearly all her keel away upon the rocks. From the first the Admiralty saw that they must consider the salving of ships as well as the sinking of them. Also, that barriers against U-boats must be laid. So Lord Fisher sent for Commodore Young, appointed him Salvage Adviser to the Admiralty, and entrusted him with this work. "Blocking-out" operations were the first taken in hand. The old battleship Hood was filled with concrete. Commodore Young towed her to Portland, turned her over in the "Hole in the Wall," and Portland was made safe against U-boats. Next he made a secure harbor for our small craft off Walton-on-the-Naze by anchoring a number of ships in line there. After this came the work of netting the channels against U-boats.

But it was not long before salvage work proper began to claim Commodore Young's attention. His most remarkable achievement in this direction during the was was the raising of submarine K 13 and rescuing from her 43 men after they had been imprisoned under water for 56 hours. He also lifted U C 5 from the banks of Harwich and brought her up the Thames, where she was placed on public exhibition.

At the outbreak of war the Admiralty had only two salvage vessels, both taken over from the Liverpool Association. Now they possess the largest salvage plant in the world and are continually increasing it. Necessarily so too, for there is an enormous amount of work to be done. The largest job in any area is that of reopening Zeebrugge, Ostend, and Nieuport and clearing from the Belgian canals the obstructions which the Huns have placed in them. In addition, there are numerous vessels to be raised all around our coasts and in the Mediterranean. Salvage operations are going on in all these places under Commodore Young's supervision. Indeed, it would hardly be overstating things to say that at the moment his activities are almost world-wide.

PORT SAID LACKS THRILLS.

British Have Cleaned Up Picturesque City.

Percival Phillips, who was one of the correspondents who toured Canada with the Prince of Wales last fall, writes in the London Express as follows from Port Said, the Egyptian port on the Suez Canal:

Old travelers come ashore and smile sadly. New travelers plunge into the stronghold of curio merchants with surprise and disappointment. Port Said, like the rest of the world, has been changed by the war. Port Said, to be quite frank, has been cleaned up.

Time was when a brief saunter through the ramshackle bazaar meant a terrific battle with touts. Shady gentlemen of all nationalities, most of them known to the police of two continents, plied their disreputable trades with impunity. An incredible amount of rubbish was carted away by tourists in memory of a few hours' stay. Murder was a pastime after dark, and many sinister stories were told in the smoking-rooms of departing liners, of Port Said's wicked inhabitants.

Now this gateway to the East is as safe as Streatham, and nearly as respectable. The hand of the A.P.M. has been laid in no uncertain manner on the underworld which was the real Port Said. Deportations eased the town of its international rogues and vagabonds. A passport control second to none in effectiveness keeps a tight grip on the polyglot population. Murder, even routine robbery, which was a staple industry on steamer days, is discouraged by the representatives of British rule.

Gone, too, is the atmosphere of piracy and pillage maintained by brazen guides and other varieties of profiteers. They were wont to seize on amiable and inquisitive tourists with the persistence of a leech. They would extract money by entreaties, argument, threats, even violence.

Now the touts and trinket sellers and ragged bootblacks approach their prey with marked diffidence. A single sharp refusal usually suffices to turn them off. They will drop the trail immediately they see that no business is to be done.

"They never know," said a cynical English resident, "when they are likely to run against an Australian in mufti."

The Australians, it appears, discouraged their attentions in a simple, direct fashion characteristic of the breed. A blow squarely on the point of the jaw usually followed the third application for alms or a refusal to "buzz off." Broken heads were plentiful in Port Said until the native parasite and his Levantine brother learned wisdom.

The lesson sticks in their minds. Achmed will plead for patronage for his harbor boat; Mohammed trots beside you with a plaintive appeal to be allowed to "show you all the city"; the little Achmes and Mohammeds still race through the dust—meanwhile adroitly scattering it on your boots — with shrill offers to "shine 'em up, all bright," but they keep a wary eye on walking sticks and soon drop away.

SEELY VISITS CANADA.

He Led Canada's Cavalry During the War.

Maj.-Gen. Rt. Hon. John B. Seely, for nearly four years commander of the Canadian Cavalry Brigade in France during the war and in command of mounted troops in the South African war, paid a visit to Canada recently.

Born in May, 1868, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, Maj.-Gen. Seely has had a brilliant career. His usefulness to his country has countless times been demonstrated. In 1897 he was called to the Bar. He was first elected to the House of Commons for an Isle of Wight constituency in 1900, and in 1910 for the Ilkeston Division of Derby, which seat he still holds. In the South African war he served with the Imperial Yeomanry and won several marks. From 1908 to 1910 he held the office of Under-Secretary for the Colonies, and in 1911 Under-Secretary of War. Then from 1912 to the outbreak of the European war he was Secretary of War.

Early in 1915, on the recommendation of Lord Kitchener, Col. Seely was appointed to command the Canadian Cavalry Brigade. The appointment was popular both in Canada and Great Britain and his three and a half years of leadership was marked by great distinction. The following excerpt is taken from a London cable despatch to Canadian newspapers at the time of his appointment, and giving an account of a discussion of the move in the House of Commons:

"His appointment was recommended by the field marshal commanding and was confirmed by the Secretary of War.

"Lord Beresford asked was it possible for the Secretary of War to know anything about Canadian opinion on this matter. Had the censor stopped publication of Canadian opinion upon the subject, and was the House to understand that this country did not want to know Canadian opinion on the subject, which had created great interest in the Dominion?

"Mr. Tennant said he was unable to say what the censor had done, but the only Canadian officer with whom he had discussed the matter not only accepted this appointment, but informed him it was highly popular."

One writer, discussing Seely's relation to Kitchener in the earlier days of the war, said:

"The fact that Col. Seely, although a former Minister of War, has during the present conflict accepted comparatively subordinate positions, being attached to Gen. French's staff, reveals his strength of character and inherent patriotism. Many men, under similar circumstances, would have been disposed to sulk. It will be remembered that Col. Seely's resignation from the War Office was occasioned by the misunderstanding as to the conduct of certain army officers in the Ulster crisis. Gen. French and another member of the Army Council, feeling that some reflection was cast upon themselves and their action, resigned, and Col. Seely felt that he was left with no alternative but to resign also. Premier Asquith endeavored to dissuade him, but Col. Seely insisted on taking his place with brother officers.

"Incidentally, however, this paved the way for Lord Kitchener's installation as Minister of War in this supreme crisis. Mr. Asquith for a time, before war loomed on the horizon, maintained the dual office of Prime Minister and Secretary of State for War, and when the crisis came and it was universally recognized that Lord Kitchener was the man to handle the situation, Mr. Asquith had no difficulty in asking Lord Kitchener, as a non-party man, to accept the portfolio of War Minister, and thus emphasize the nation's solidarity.

"Col. Seely would be the last man to complain of his successor, and his patriotism will commend him to our boys as one by whom they may well be proud to be led."

Bruce's Mother.

"Now tell me," said a school inspector, "who was the mother of the great Scottish hero, Robert Bruce?" He pointed to the boy at the head of the class and then round the others. There was no answer. Then at last the heart of the teacher leaped with joy. The boy who was standing at the very foot had held up his hand. "Well, my boy," said the inspector, encouragingly, "who was she?" "Please, sir, Mrs. Bruce."

£2,500 for a Lamb MSS.

Twelve shillings and sixpence was a large sum for Charles Lamb to pay for a rare book, although he was an enthusiastic collector; but not long ago a collector in Philadelphia paid $2,500 for the manuscript of Lamb's "Dissertion upon Roast Pig." It is pathetic that after Lamb's long struggle against poverty other men should get such prices for his work; but it is a familiar story in literary history.

The Thirteenth Commandment

"That makes no difference," Daphne stormed, already converted to the shop religion. "Customers must not find the door shut. Run open it at once. Suppose Mrs. Romilly dropped in. We'd lose her—unless this notoriety drives her away." A little blush of shame flickered in Daphne's pale cheeks a moment and went out. She sighed: "I suppose Mr. Duane has stopped that check, too—if he ever sent it. Oh, dear!"

Then a nurse knocked; brought in a card growing in a large little anxious tree. Daphne scanned it. "Mr. Thomas Varick Duane!" She peered closer at the printings and read aloud: "I just learned. I'm heartbroken. Isn't there anything I can do?"

Daphne felt as if outraged society had forgiven her.

"Isn't he a darling?" she murmured.

Mrs. Chivvis begrudged a stingy, "Well, of course—" She had the poor folks' conscientious scruples against wasting praise on the rich. "You'll want to see him, I presume."

But Daphne had had enough of evil appearance. "See him here? Never!" She glared at poor Mrs. Chivvis with a reproof that was excruciating to accept, and ordered her to go down and meet Mr. Duane and incidentally learn about the check. "Business is business," she said.

Mrs. Chivvis descended in all the confusion of a Puritan wife meeting a Cavalier beau. She cam- back later to say that Mr. Duane was really very nice, and spoke beautifully, and had sent the check and apologized another if Daphne wished it, and would make old Mrs. Romilly go on with the order, and would she like some special fruits or soups or something? He was really very nice.

Daphne eyed her with ironic horror and said, "You've been flirting with him! and me so helpless here!"

"Daph!—nee!! Kip!!!" Mrs. Chivvis screeched. The only counter-thrust she could think of was, "And what does Mr. Wimburn say?"

This sobered Daphne. Why had Clay sent no word? Everybody else in town had seen the papers. Clay read the papers. Surely he was incapable of such monstrous pique. When your worst enemy gets badly hurt you've just got to forgive—if you're human.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Lelia was determined to endure everything that might be necessary to regain her beauty. She would go through any ordeal of knives or plaster casts or splints or medicines for that. She was quite grim about it. Her resolution extended to the spending of as much of Bayard's money as might be necessary on surgeons' fees and doctors' bills. If she bankrupted Bayard it would be with the tenderest motives.

Five times she went to the operating table, made that infernal journey into etherland, knowing what afteranguishes waited her, what retching and burning and bleeding. She braved death again and again, took long chances with cowering bravado. And all for Bayard's sake.

One morning when Bayard reached his office after a harrowing all-night vigil at Lelia's side he was just falling asleep over the first mail when his telephone snarled. He reached for it with alarm. A voice boomed in his ear:

"Ah you thah?"

"Yes."

"Keep the line, please. Now, you ah through, sir?"

Then a growl replaced the boom, a growl that made the receiver rattle:

"Ah you thah, Mr. Kip? This is Colonel Marchmont. I dare say you remember our conversation about those damned contracts with Wetherell. A little farther discussion might not be amiss—if you could make it perfectly convenient to drop ovvah at, say, a quawtah pahst fah? —Good! I shall expect you at that ah."

Bayard pondered. What new persecution was fate preparing? As he went to the office, he bought an evening paper. A heavily headed cablegram announced that the laborers in the British munition works were striking or threatening to strike. A gleam of understanding came into Bayard's eye. When he reached the desk of Colonel Marchmont he looked unabashed into the revolver muzzle of the old war horse's one eye.

Without any preliminary courtesies or any softening of his previous tone the colonel snorted: "Those devilish contracts you made with Wetherell—The poor fellow is no longer alive—more's the pity, but— Well, I'm afraid I was a bit severe with you. I fancy we might see our way to renewing those contracts at a reasonable figure —say at a 25 per cent reduction from the terms you quoted."

Bayard smiled and shook his head. He bluffed the bluffer. "The prices we quoted included only a fair profit, colonel. Since then materials have been going up in price every minute, owing to the demand from abroad. And the home market is booming. We can sell all our product here, and more, too, than we can make."

Colonel Marchmont squirmed, but he was a soldier and loved a good counter-attack. He smiled as he squirmed. Wetherell was avenged, when his successor signed new contracts at a higher price than he had made. The changing times changed everything; yesterday's exorbitance was today's bargain.

Bayard departed with a wallet full of business. He got back to his office on feet fledged with Mercurial wings. His feet were beautiful on the rug of the president's office.

Bayard felt so kindly to all the world that he hurried to the hospital to scatter good news like flowers over Lelia's couch. She was in that humor when anybody else's good fortune was an added grief to her.

"I'm no use to you now," she wailed. "I never was much. But at least I dressed and kept looking fit. And you said I was pretty. But now— Oh, Bayard, Bayard! You used to call me beautiful, and I tried to be beautiful for you. But now— To be ugly and useless both—it's too much!"

While pathologists say that when you are wandering in strange country you should turn every now and then and look back at the way you came. It wears a different aspect entirely from the look as you approached, and you will need to know how it will look when you return.

From childhood on, Lelia had been warned against extravagance—as Bayard had, as have we all. But only now that she was looking backward could she realise the wisdom, the intolerable truth of the adage, "Waste not, want not."

Meanwhile Daphne was having so different a history that she felt ashamed. It seemed unfair to her to get well quickly and with no blemish except a scar or two that would not show, while Lelia hung between death and deformity.

But seeing Bayard alone and hearing Lelia fret, she felt confirmed in her belief that she had done the wholesome thing when she joined the laboring classes. There was discouragements without cease, yet Daphne was learning what a remedy for how many troubles there is in work. It seemed to be almost panacea. It was exciting, fatiguing, alarming, but it was objective. She was on her way at last to that fifty thousand a year she had dreamed of. She was uncertain yet of earning a thousand a year, but she was on the road.

Clay Wimburn, seeking chances in the West, did not see the New York papers or any other record of Daphne's accident. When he got back to New York, his pockets full of contracts, Bayard, equally successful, greeted him enthusiastically. Then he learned of the accident and the fact that Daphne was "in trade." He was indignant at the news and wanted to see her at once.

Bayard gave him the address, and Clay wasted no time asking further questions. He made haste to the subway, fuming: left the train at the Grand Central station and climbed up to a taxicab.

Then he found Daphne.

She led him into a little shop empty of everything but the debris of removal.

"Where are we?" said Clay.

"This was my shop."

"What's the matter? Busted already?" Clay asked, with a not unflattering cheerfulness.

"Not in the least," Daphne explained. "We've expanded so fast we had to move. We sublet and moved across the street.

"You remember Mrs. Chivvis, don't you? Mrs. Chivvis, you haven't forgotten Mr. Wimburn. He's kept away so long you might have, though. Where've you been, Clay? But wait—you can tell me on the way over to the new shop."

When she led him into her new emporium the graceful fabrics displayed were all red rags to him. He was a bull in a crimson shop.

Daphne made Clay sit down and asked him if it were not all perfectly lovely. He waited until Mrs. Chivvis went on to the workroom. He had a glimpse of a number of girls and women on sewing beat. They were laughing and chattering.

He answered, "It's perfectly loathsome."

Instead of resenting this insult Daphne laughed till she fell against the counter. The worst of it was that her eyes were so tender.

"Where did you get all the capital for all this stock?" Clay demanded, with sudden suspicion.

"Oh, part of it we bought on credit and part of it on borrowed money."

"Borrowed from whom?"

"From Mr. Duane."

This was too much of too much. Clay stormed: "I'll get him!"

"Oh, no, you won't!"

"Oh, yes, I will!"

"I won't have you assaulting the best friend I've got in the world."

He groaned aloud at this, not noticing how she used the word "friend." She ran on. She had not talked to him for so long that she was a perfect chatterbox.

"He lent me five hundred dollars when I didn't know where else to get it. And it nailed our first real contract—a big commission from old Mrs. Romilly. We paid back Mr. Duane's five hundred and then—" She giggled in advance at what was coming to Clay. "And then I borrowed a thousand from him. We owe him that now."

Clay was as wroth as she had wished. He took out a little book. "Well, I'll give you a check for that amount—or more. And you can pay Duane off with interest. I won't have you owing him money."

"You won't have!" Daphne mocked. "You won't have? Since when did you become senior partner here?"

"Senior partner!" Clay railed. "I'm no partner in this business! I hate this business. It makes me sick to see you in it."

"Then step out on the walk," said Daphne. "You're scaring away customers and using the time of the firm. The boudoir is no place for you, anyway."

A young woman with a bridal eye walked in and Daphne left Clay to blunder out sheepishly. He did not see that she cast sheep's eyes after him. He was a most bewildered young man. He had made a pile of money and still he was not happy!

CHAPTER XXVII.

In the course of a few wretched days Clay picked up some of the facts about Daphne's presence in Wetherell's fatal car. He was more furious at her than ever and more incapable of hating her.

He saw Bayard often, but Bayard knew little and said less. One afternoon he invited Clay to ride with him to the hospital, whence Lelia was to be graduated. He warned Clay not to betray how shocked he would be at Lelia's appearance, which, he said, was a wonderful improvement on what it had been.

She was, indeed, a mere shell, and Clay was not entirely successful with his compliments.

Lelia sighed: "Much obliged for your good intentions. I'm a mere sack of bones, but I'm going to get well. The doctors say that if I take care of myself every minute and go to a lot of specialists and go to Bar Harbor in the hot weather and to Palm Beach in the cold and spend about a million dollars I'll be myself some day. That's not much, but it's all I've got to work for. Poor Bydie! He didn't know he was endowing a hospital when he married me."

"What do I care, honey?" Bayard cried, with perfect chivalry. "The money is rolling in and I'd rather spend it on you than on anybody else."

"The money's rolling out just as fast as it rolls in," Lelia sighed. "The Lord seems to provide a new expense for every streak of luck. And that's my middle name—Expense."

She had actually learned one lesson. That was a hopeful sign.

Clay sought Daphne in her odious (to him) place of business. She asked him what she could sell him. He said he would wait till the shop closed. She raised her eyebrows impudently and gave him a chair in a corner. He sat there feeling as out of place as a strange man in a harem.

Eventually the last garrulous customer talked herself dumb; the last sewing woman went. Mrs. Chivvis pulled down the curtains in the show window and at the door and bade good night.

Then Daphne locked the door, dropped wearily into a chair, and sighed, "Well, Clay?"

"I want to know why you don't give up Tom Duane."

She shrugged her excellent shoulders again, but she did not smile. She spoke instead: "I don't ask you to give up your stenographer."

"Oh, it's like that, eh? Well, then, why won't you let me lend you money instead of Tom Duane?"

Her answer astounded him with its feminine logic: "I can borrow of Mr. Duane because I don't love him and never did and he knows it. I can't borrow of you because—"

He leaped at the implication: "Because you love me?"

"Because I used to."

"Don't you any more?" he groaned.

"How can I tell? It's been months and months since I saw the Clay Wimburn that came out to Cleveland and lured me on to New York. The only Clay Wimburn I've seen for some time has been a horribly prosperous, domineering snob who is too proud to be seen with a working woman. He wants to marry a lady. I never was one and don't want to be one. I'm a business woman and I love it."

"And you wouldn't give up your shop for me?"

"Certainly not."

He looked at her with baffled emotions. She was so delectable and so obstinate, so right-hearted and so wrong-headed. It was intolerable that she should keep a shop. He spoke after a long delay:

"May I come and see you once in a while?"

"If you want to."

"Where you living now?"

"Still at the Chivvises'."

"You ought to take better care of yourself than that. Surely you can afford a better home."

"I suppose so, but it would be lonely anywhere else. It has been safe there—since you quit calling on me. It doesn't cost me much."

"But you're making so much money."

"Not so very much—yet, but it's all my own and I made every cent of it, and—golly! how I love to watch it grow."

"You miser."

"Maybe. I guess that's the only way to save money—to make a passion out of it and get a kind of voluptuous feeling from it. But I really think that it's the fun of making it that interests me most. It certainly keeps me out of mischief and out of loneliness. Oh, there's no freedom like having a job and a little reserve in the bank. It's the only life, Clay."

"And you wouldn't give up your freedom, as you call it, even for a man you loved? Couldn't you love a man enough to do that?"

"I could love a man too much to do that. For where's the love in a woman's sitting around the house all day and waiting for a man to come home and listen to the gossip of her empty brain? That isn't loving, that's loafing."

Clay was not at all persuaded. "But there's no comfort or home life in marrying a business woman."

"How do you know? You know plenty of unsuccessful wives who are not business women."

"I want a housekeeper, not a shopkeeper."

"Go get one, then, I say. If a woman can't earn enough outside to hire a housekeeper to her do her own housework. But if she can earn enough to hire a hundred housekeepers why should she stick to the kitchen? In my home, if I ever get one, the cook will not be the star. Besides, it enlarges life so. Instead of two living on the wages of one two will live on the earnings of two. It seems to me it couldn't help being a better and a happier way of living."

"It Seems to Me It Couldn't Help Being a Better and a Happier Way of Living."

Clay blushed vigorously as he mumbled "What's your business woman going to do when the—the babies come? Or do you cut out the kiddies?"

Daphne blushed, too. "Well, I should think that the business woman could afford babies better than anybody else, one has to give up the housework, anyway, even when she's a housekeeper, I suppose she could give up her shop for a while. At least she could share the expense—or her husband could stand the bills since he escapes the pain. I tell you, if I ever had a daughter I'd make her learn her own trade if she never learned anything else. I'd never raise her to the hideous, indecent belief that the world owes her a living and she's got a right to squeeze it out of the heart's blood of some hard-working man. No, sirree! It may be old-fashioned, but it isn't decent, and it isn't even romantic. The love of two free souls, with their own careers and their own expenses, seems to me about the best kind of love there could be. Then both of them can come home evenings and their home will be a home—a fresh, sweet meeting place."

Clay breathed hard. He was silenced, but not convinced—beyond being convinced that Daphne Kip was still the one woman in the world for him, in spite of her, cantankerous notions. Still, of course, a woman had to have some flaw or she would not be human. Daphne's foible was as harmless as anyone's, perhaps. So he blurted out:

"I suppose you've given up all thought of marrying me?"

She answered him with pious earnestness: "I've never given up that thought, Clay. I've been trying to make myself worthy of the happiness it would mean. I have had the trousseau all made, and paid for, a long while. That's what I came to town for originally—our trousseau. But when I saw how much sacrifice it meant for my poor old father and what a bundle of bills I'd be dumping on my poor young lover I couldn't see the good of it. So I took my vow that I wouldn't get a trousseau till I could earn the price of it myself. And now I've earned the price and I've got it. But I've lost my excuse for wearing it.

"Still, I'd probably have lost you, anyway, or ruined you if I had brought you my old ideas. Everybody always says that money is the enemy of love. I wonder if it couldn't be made the friend. It would be an interesting experiment, anyway."

"Daphne, honey, let's try the experiment."

She looked at him with a heavenly smile in her eyes, and answered, "Let's."

He moved toward her, but she dodged behind the counter. She studied him a moment, then reached below the counter. A bell rang and a drawer slid out. She took some bills from it, made a memorandum on a slip of paper, and put that in the place of the bills, closed the drawer, and leaned across the counter, murmuring:

"There, say all successful businesses are begun on borrowed money. So I'll borrow this from the firm—for luck."

She put out her hand. Clay put out his. She laid three dollars on his palm and closed his fingers on them.

"What's all this?" he asked, all mystified. She explained:

"A plain gold band costs about six dollars, and that's for my half of the partnership. Women are wearing their wedding rings very light nowadays."

"I should say so!" Clay groaned, but with a smile.

She bent forward and he bent forward and their lips met. She was only a salesgirl—a customer part of a heart for part of a heart, but to Clay the very counter was the golden bar of heaven, and Daphne the Blessed Damozel that leaned on it and made it warm.

PRESENCE OF ORGANDIE HATS

At Least One Piece of This Charming Headgear Is Regarded Necessary by All Women.

Organdie hats are just now diverse and beautiful. A few seasons ago they popped into the horizon as a possibility and were given more or less passing and amused attention, but now everybody is doing at least one organdie hat. It is a hat to lend women astray and to lure from their pocketbooks much unnecessary money. They had planned to let slip away in that direction, for such hats are apt to be so becoming that, in spite of the fact that they are perishable in the extreme, they are irresistible.

In pastel shades and colorings these organdie hats have reached their highest development. The violets and pinks and yellows are fascinating. Often they are trimmed with nothing at all, but are so constructed and shaped that their rolling brims and their softly folded crowns take care of the whole duty of a hat. Then there are some which are trimmed with big flowers made of the same material. Others are done with dotted bows to chime in with the frocks which the hats are designed to accompany. One of these organdie hats was made of white and was trimmed with a large and sweeping bow of wide black velvet ribbon across the front. One could picture it worn with the whitest of white dresses made also of the crispy white organdie material. Another organdie hat had a band of purple faille ribbon wound closely about the base of the draped crown of mauve. Another had a basket of fresh and modern posies embroidered on the front of a draped pink organdie crown. They are done in all manners—these transparent hats of summer—and each one is most charming.

DAISIES USED AS TRIMMING

The daisy trimmed straw chapeau—a hat finished at the edges with taffeta daisies is one of the latest Parisian fashions.

To Launder Worn Curtains.

Darn all holes by placing tissue paper underneath, then sew closely on sewing machine. Make a suds hot as can be borne on the hands. Fold the curtain flat, small enough to go through the wringer. Work carefully with the hands, press through wringer. If much soiled use another suds, rinse and starch without unfolding, using wringer for each. Spread sheets on a carpet and pin. Carefully unfold curtains, spread out perfectly true and even, then pull out each scallop; the wet curtain will adhere to the sheet without pinning and when dry will hang as true as if stretched on a frame.

Bridesmaids in Yellow Velvet.

A recent bride had her maids dressed in soft yellow chiffon velvet frocks; it gave a delightful background of sunniness to her wedding on a dull day, and took off the chilly look rainy day weddings usually have. Gold brocade toques completed the gowns which were as simple as possible, had long sleeves and only a band of brown fur round the shoulders for trimming.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. VICTORIAN CELEBRITIES.

New Anecdotes of Some Famous Writers.

Amongst the many excellent new stories about celebrities in the Victorian world of art, literature, and politics in the "Recollections of Lady Georgiana Peel," (daughter of Lord John Russell), compiled by her daughter, Ethel Peel, are the following:

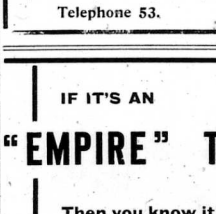

"Mr. Thackeray would sometimes come down to Pembroke Lodge, bringing one of his last new books, and read if out loud to us himself, giving us untold pleasure. Mr. Charles Dickens was a very great friend, and was always very welcome at any time. These two great novelists often lunched and dined with us, both at Cheshan Place and Pembroke Lodge. Mr. Dickens had such a very evident respect and love for my father that few things gave him more pleasure than a day at Pembroke Lodge. In the evening, I remember, he was conspicuous, owing to wearing a pink shirt front embroidered with white; but a genius can always wear whatever he chooses. Sometimes he would be seized with a fit of shyness or modesty, for he would suddenly slip away directly after dinner, and people who had come in later, having been asked to meet him, would all be saying, 'But where is Mr. Charles Dickens?' 'Mr. Thackeray, when he dined with us at Cheshan Place, generally liked to leave directly after dinner, and not come up to the drawing-room to talk with the ladies. One day he never appeared at all for a dinner-party when expected; in reply to my stepmother's inquiries, he sent her a little pen-and-ink sketch of himself, waiting despairingly for the invitation from Lady John Russell, which she had told him to expect, and which never came! This was the real explanation of his non-arrival.

Perhaps the most interesting of all the friends who constantly came to both Cheshan Place and Pembroke Lodge was 'Macaulay.' He was invariably called 'Macaulay' without any prefix, and I think used even to give his name like that for the servant to announce him. Young and frivolous people of my day — of whom, I must say, he never took much notice—approved much of the tale told, that some years before Sydney Smith had said very gravely, towards the end of dinner, 'Macaulay, when I'm dead, you'll be sorry you never heard me talk.' The reverend gentleman also alluded to him as 'that talk-mill Macaulay.'"

Mistake In Feeding Grain.

Perhaps the most common mistake in feeding grain to dairy cows is the practice of feeding every cow in the herd the same quantity regardless of the amount of milk she is producing, instead of regulating the grain according to the daily amount of milk produced.

Considerable waste of feed may result from failure to balance rations. This is especially true if the ration has proven to be in protein; for, while an excess of protein may be substituted for energy, energy producing foods can in no case take the place of protein in a ration. The milk flow, therefore, may be limited to the protein content of the ration, even the energy producing foods may be present in excess. An economical ration is a balanced ration.

Women of Canada Testify

Daere," Ont.:—"I am more than pleased with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I was run-down and so nervous that I could not even stay in the house alone in the day-time and tried every kind of medicine I heard of but got no result. One of my friends advised me to take 'Favorite Prescription,' said that it would cure me, and it did. After taking four bottles I felt like a new woman and it is also the very best medicine for a woman bringing up a family. I will recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to any one suffering like I did."—MRS. JOSEPH BEAUDRY, R. R. 2.

WEAK AND NERVOUS

Tillsonburg, Ont.—"I found Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription an excellent medicine for the ailments of women. I had become very weak and nervous. I was just miserable when I began taking the 'Favorite Prescription' and it proved most beneficial. It so completely restored me to health that I have never had any return of this ailment. I do advise the use of 'Favorite Prescription' by women who suffer with womanly trouble."—MRS. GEO. WALKER, R. O. Box 490.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of lady's slipper root, black cohosh root, unicorn root, blue cohosh root and Oregon grape root. Dr. Pierce knew, when he first made this standard medicine, that whiskey and morphine were injurious, and so he has always kept them out of his remedies. Women who take this standard remedy know that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it, in liquid or tablet form.

Nationalists Active.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, Oct. 26.—The Free State Nationalist Congress, in session here, adopted resolutions supplemental to a declaration of party principles, proclaiming the sovereign will of the peoples in the Union of South Africa, their right to secede from Great Britain or break any existing bond between the Union and Great Britain, and declaring opposition to a closer Imperial Union.

The resolutions advised, however, that no decisive step regarding secession be taken unless a majority of the people express such a desire through a referendum.

Spracklin Loses Speed Boat.

WINDSOR, Oct. 26. — The speed boat, the Leopard, provided by the Ontario Government for Mr. Spracklin to catch rum runners smuggling liquor from Canada to Detroit, was burned Saturday afternoon when it took fire while being tried out for its first night's work on the Detroit river. The speed boat was to have been used Saturday night for the first time. It was sent to Windsor Friday upon request of Mr. Spracklin. The boat became ignited when the motor backfired.

STORING VEGETABLE CROPS.

Potatoes Should Be Kept Dry In Temperature Below 40 Degrees F.

The vegetable crop has been an abundant one in most places in Canada this year, and many persons will have a large quantity to store. It is important that care be taken in storing so that losses will be reduced to a minimum.

Potatoes should be dry when stored and where possible, put where the temperature will not go above 40 deg. F. or below 32 degs. F. In order that the surface of the potatoes can be kept dry and in the best condition to avoid rotting, provision should be made for air to pass underneath and through them. If they are stored in considerable or large quantities such provision is made by keeping the potatoes about six inches off the floor by first putting down a slatted temporary floor with the boards just close enough so the potatoes will not fall through, and a similar slatted temporary wall a few inches from the permanent wall would permit a still freer circulation of air. Keeping them in crate-like boxes with openings between the boards on tops and sides is a good method.

Beets, parsnips, carrots, salsify and turnips keep best under conditions somewhat similar to potatoes though it is not so important to keep them dry. Indeed in the average cellar they are liable to become too dry and lose their firmness. If there is danger of this they may be kept in boxes and covered with a sack kept wet. In a warm cellar they will grow.

Onions are very liable to rot unless kept in a dry place. Keep them spread out as thinly as possible. Where quantities are small, an attic room where there is no frost will be found a good place to store them.

Cabbage will soon wilt in a warm dry cellar. Keep them outside as long as possible by protecting them with leaves, straw, or soil. If they begin to crack before it is time to pull them, loosen them in the ground by twisting the plant and thus checking growth. When stored where the air is very dry they keep better with the roots and stems left on, and wrapping each head in a newspaper will prevent wilting to some extent.

Celery is left outside until danger of severe frosts. To keep well in storage it needs a moderately dry, well ventilated, cool cellar for best results. The celery should be planted in the cellar in rows close together in sand or light soil, separating each row with a lath or other pieces of wood to keep the tops somewhat apart and better to ensure a circulation of air. The soil should be kept moist but the tops dry. Avoid wetting the leaves and stalks if watering is necessary.

To store green tomatoes to ripen them put in closed boxes or drawers where they will be in the dark and in a moderately warm place.—W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist.

liquid form, and more particularly to instruments for dosing hogs, it has for its object to provide a device whereby a hog can be easily handled and the medicine easily and more certainly applied internally. The device comprises a jaw spreading member, and a lower jaw clamping member, connected with a flexible tube, and funnel to receive the medicine.

Mosaic Disease.

Mosaic disease of potatoes, which in affected crops reduces the yield by from 20 to 50 per cent., has been thoroughly investigated by specialists of the Agricultural Experiment Station in the State of Maine. The conclusions arrived at after a series of experiments extending over the past two years are that the first essential in preventing the occurrence of the disease is to secure seed stock from fields entirely free of mosaic. The clean seed tubers must be kept apart from all other potatoes until planted, and the field in which they are planted must be isolated from all fields where mosaic occurs. Furthermore, precaution should be taken against the clean plants being attacked by aphids, which are known to carry the disease from affected plants.

USE "DIAMOND DYES"

Dye right! Don't risk your material. Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can diamond-dye a new, rich color into old garments, draperies, coverings, everything, whether wool, silk, linen, cotton or mixed goods.

Adaptability Is Necessary.

There is such a thing as a natural aptitude for different kinds of business. One farmer will grow poor on a rich farm, while another will grow rich on a poor farm. One poultryman will make money in fowls, and another will lose it. The one is adapted to his business, the other is the right man in the wrong place, or the wrong man in the right place. Success can be had only when the right man is in the right place.

Watch All Ewes Carefully.

After the lambs have been washed, the ewes should be put on a dry feed for a day in order to stop the flow of milk, the udders should be watched carefully and milked when necessary. The future usefulness of the ewe may be ruined if her udder is allowed to cake.

An Eye-Opener.

A domestic servant was looking for a "place." She was recommended to apply at a large house near Glasgow, but she was told that the mistress was very strict. Entering the gate, she saw an old man working in the garden, and, plucking up courage, told him her errand and her fears, and asked him for his advice. He advised her to go and see the lady herself, adding, "I get on fine, masel'." In a short time she emerged, smiling. "Like her looks," she said to her adviser, "and I'm engaged. Come with me, and I'll stand ye a dram." "Lassie, I dorna," he replied; "the mistress might notice it on me, and it might cost me my place." "Notice it!" cried the tempter, "nae fear o' that, if you just put some o' the parsley you're working into your mouth." Some days afterwards, the new kitchenmaid had occasion to pass through the hall shortly before dinner, when to her surprise she saw her old friend the gardener coming down the stairs in evening dress. Grasping another servant by the arm, she gasped, "Who's that man?" "That? Oh, that's the maister."

The Oldest Tune.

The English-speaking peoples' song of acclamation, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," is sung to a tune that has been popular for a thousand years or more. Composed, it is said, in Babylon, the ancient Egyptians popularized it in Africa and Asia Minor, where the Arabs sing it to this day. The Crusaders learnt the air from the Saracens and sung it under the walls of Jerusalem, and by them it was carried into Europe and added to the folk-song music of many nations. In France it became the tune of "Malbrouk s'en ya t'en guerre," a satirical song, written after the battle of Malplaquet in 1709 upon the supposed death of Marlborough. England sang "We won't go home till morning" to the air, but it now belongs to the toast with which we acclaim our princes, heroes, and other good fellows.

"S. S. Hard Luck."

Two years it took the steamer Assouan (dubbed "S. S. Hark Luck") to voyage from New York to Cape Town. The Assouan had almost as much hard luck as the well-known barque of the Ancient Mariner.

Here's the log of the Assouan in brief: With hatches down on her cargo, she drew into the stream at New York, October 20, 1918. Influenza broke out. Disease raged 14 days and affected all but three of the ship's company. Nearly a fourth of the crew died.

A plague of flies visited the ship and polluted the food.

An Arab crew was shipped and the vessel put to sea. The condenser sprung a leak and the Assouan put in at St. Lucia, in the West Indies.

Cleared of St. Lucia, an eccentric shaft broke and she limped to Trinidad and spent two months at the dock.

Sailed with a new crew and a new shaft. Three days out condenser leaked again. Returned to Trinidad. Several weeks later sailed again.

Four days from Trinidad main sea cock opened in some manner, flooded the hold and extinguished the fires. Hand pumps were rusted. Managed to repair the damage. Then another machine broke and back she went to Martinique.

Meanwhile her owners were anxious and cabled that a new captain be authorized. Cable was misinterpreted and not heeded.

The British consul was appealed to by the owners to take charge of the ship. An uprising in Trinidad called away the only available warship and so the Assouan continued to bob at her dock.

She had mutiny aboard. Then the mutiny was put down but still the ship remained in the harbor.

Then one fine day a steam launch of H. M. S. Constance came alongside and put aboard Captain J. Macnaley, British navy, who took command of the vessel and sailed her to Cape Town.

A Letter-writing Nation.

England has now become a great letter-writing nation. When Queen Victoria came to the throne the yearly average number of letters delivered to each person in the United Kingdom was three. When she died it was 57. In the first year of the war it was 74. As the war-struggle became fiercer and our young men went abroad to fight, letters poured out to them from home. In June, 1918, our homepost to France consisted of some ten millions each week—an average of nearly five for each soldier!—Tit-Bits.

Big Irrigation Scheme.

A project to dam the Sutlej river in the Punjab is now being investigated by the British Government. If carried out it will supply irrigation to over 2,000,000 acres of dry famine tract and give India a record highest dam of the world, about 135 feet higher than the present highest—the Arrowrock, in California. The report of the geological expert who inspected the site is exceedingly favorable. It will also when complete help to supply the Punjab industries with a cheap supply of electric power.

The Quebec Heater with oven, is becoming very popular. A fine stock in at WILSON'S Hardware.
